OTTAWA (AP) — The Canadian government on Thursday formally requested the United States to return U.S. Army deserter Ronald J. Anderson to Canada.

Anderson, who had been living in Canada as a landed immigrant, was arrested last Saturday by U.S. Customs Service agents at Peace Arch International Park at the border between Washington State and British Columbia.

The Customs Service in Washington, D.C., acknowledged earlier Thursday that its agents crossed a few yards into Canada to recapture Anderson when he tried to escape arrest at a border crossing at Blaine, Wash.

Canada's External Affairs Department released a statement late Thursday saying the formal request for Anderson's return was delivered to the U.S. Embassy in Ottawa.

The department had concluded that Anderson was apprehended on Canadian soil, the statement said.

The department began investigating Anderson's arrest after his attorney, Don Rosenbloom of Vancouver, B.C., said he had newspaper photographs, movie film and eyewitness reports to back up his assertion that Anderson was captured in Canada and dragged across the border to the United States.

After the U.S. Customs Service acknowledged it had recaptured Anderson on Canadian soil, Rosenbloom said: "We take great pleasure that the American government finally has acknowledged that the arrest took place on our soil."

He said the acknowledgment is "in itself an admission of wrongdoing."

Anderson and his wife, Marion, had been living in Mission, B.C., where he worked as a carpenter after deserting from the Army in 1968. He had expected to receive Canadian citizenship this fall.

The Customs spokesman said Anderson was taken inside the headquarters for the U.S. border agents at Peace Arch International Park, but he broke away and ran toward the border.

Officers caught him "a few yards" inside Canada, the spokesman said.

"We do not knowingly cross the border after someone" but the agents were in hot pursuit and were unaware they were on Canadian territory until they apprehended Anderson, the spokesman said.

"We believe that our officers were acting properly and within their authority," the spokesman added.

The spokesman said they retained Anderson in custody on the advice of the assistant U.S. attorney in Seattle. A final ruling on the arrest should properly be left to the courts, the Customs spokesman said.

Anderson was transferred from Blaine to Ft. Lewis near Tacoma, Wash., while the Army prepared charges of absent without official leave.

Anderson's mother, Betty Peterson of Poulso, Wash., said her son deserted from the Army after he was denied status as a conscientious objector.

She said her son occasionally crossed the border from British Columbia into Washington State to visit relatives.

Fair Opens In Usual Chaos

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The Nebraska State Fair got underway at 4 p.m. Thursday with the usual utter confusion, a sprinkling of rain, swarms of autos and frustrated exhibitors.

Henry Brandt, manager of the fair, rode about the grounds in a golf cart solving problems, answering questions, directing lost exhibitors and thoroughly enjoying himself.

"There will not be a news conference today. I don't want to talk to anybody until I get this thing on the road," he told reporters.

The fair board did have a meeting Thursday during which they decided to accept a bid on a storm sewer project to be constructed after the fair ends.

H. R. Brookstrom Construction Co. of Lincoln was awarded the project on the basis of its bid of $45,732.18.

Bond Sale Discussed

Board members also discussed a proposed bond sale to finance a new race track and future grandstand but took no final action on the proposal.

The members of the board then took to the fairground streets to join their rent-a-cop police force in solving parking problems, locating exhibitors' space, finding the electricity for an exhibitor who had sparks but no power and a hundred other opening day hassles.

Visitors at the State Fair will find a number of old landmarks on the fairgrounds missing this year. The all-new Agricultural Hall has replaced the ancient gray stucco building and a gleaming new Kiwanis Country Kitchen has replaced the old dining hall that the organization had operated at the fairgrounds for years.

directions to buildings and exhibits; however, judging by the number of people wandering into the press room seeking information on where exhibits are, many people are not reading the signs.

The fair will feature split shows again this year. People who want to see 4-H exhibits must come during the first half of the fair. Those who want to see FFA exhibits must come in the fair during the last half of the annual event. Both youth groups use the same facilities, once the 4-H barns but now called the Youth Complex.

Similar arrangements are also in effect in the open class barns with both dairy and beef shows split. The Holsteins, Brown Swiss, and Ayrshires have the first half of the fair and the Milking Shorthorns, Guernseys and Jersey cattle the second half.

Beef Show Split Too

The open class beef show is also split with three breeds per show. The Hereford, Shorthorn and Angus cattle are shown during the first half of the fair and the Polled Herefords, Charolais and Galloway are shown during the second half. This is the first year the Galloway cattle have had their own show at the fair.

Swine take the first half of the fair, followed by sheep in the second five days.

The popular FFA Children's Barnyard will operate all 10 days of the fair and most other exhibits will be on hand all 10 days as well.

The primary reason for the split livestock shows is lack of space in the barns for all the livestock to be exhibited at once.

The split show practice began last year during the first 10-day fair in Nebraska, but has been followed by other large fairs such as the Minnesota State Fair for many years.

Many livestock showmen like the practice because it cuts costs on the fair exhibition circuit and it often makes it possible for them to attend more fairs. Exhibiting cattle at fairs is primarily an advertising venture for many livestock breeders.

Auditor's Report Suggests County Stop Paying Phone Bill

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County should refuse to pay its phone bill if the county intends to comply with the law.

Random examples of the county's failure to comply with the law were cited in the state auditor's report for Lancaster County released last week.

The law provides that delinquent personal tax must be withheld from the amount of any claim filed by a firm or individual having such delinquency.

The report recommended the county's "immediate and complete compliance with the provisions" of the law.

Although the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. (LT&T) claims were not included in the random examples, the firm has not paid $565,058 in personal taxes which were delinquent June 1.

A check revealed that the county board has approved claims made by LT&T since then, but may not do so in the future, according to Lancaster County Board Chairman Robert Colin.

Colin said he was not aware that the board had been approving claims from individuals or firms which owed back taxes, and in his opinion, such approval must halt.

The county approved LT&T claims totaling $81,360 for the first six months of this year.

The auditor's report specifically cited an example of the county's allowing claims from the highway fund in the amounts of $1,241,185 and $2,479 to a firm which owed back taxes of $1,168.

Another example cited was the payment of a claim for $664 from the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation account when delinquent taxes amounted to $434.

After being apprised of the situation, Colin said he would contact the county attorney to see whose responsibility it is to prepare some sort of list so that such matters aren't overlooked.

He acknowledged that County Clerk Carl Hartman prepared for the board in advance of the Tuesday meeting a list of the individuals or firms filing claims to be approved at the next board meeting.

Hartman said that the clerk's office, before personal property tax on household goods and intangibles was repealed, received a list of delinquent personal property taxpayer's from the treasurer's office.

He said he thought he and County Treasurer Frank Golden could work something out in preparing such a list.

One of the problems cited by Hartman was that the computer system doesn't provide all the information in time to get the information to the board.

Approximately 500 to 600 claims are processed by the county each week, he said.

Golden said that his office maintains a card file of all delinquent taxpayers from which a check may be made.

Golden said that his office is furnished a list of the names of jurors which are checked before they are paid for jury service.

However, he said that no other list is furnished his office to check delinquent taxes.

He noted that after reminder notices are mailed a final notice is sent out noting that unless payment is made within 30 days a distress warrant will be issued and turned over to the sheriff for collection.

If the sheriff is not successful in collecting the delinquent tax, the matter is then turned over to the county attorney's office.

12-Woman Jury Named In Wounded Knee Trial

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Despite a defense challenge of the panel from which the jury was drawn, a jury of 12 women Thursday was selected — but not sworn in — for the second Wounded Knee trial in Lincoln.

Pending before U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom is a claim that the list of 62 prospective jurors for the case was not drawn in a manner to provide an accurate cross-section of the population.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln psychologist John Berman, one of two witnesses called on the issue, testified that there was only a one out of 200 chance that 42 of the 62 persons (the actual split) on the list would be women, assuming that men and women register to vote in equal numbers.

(Jurors are drawn by law from lists of registered voters.)

Berman, who conducted a telephone study of registered voters in the area from which jurors were drawn, also said that, according to the study, housewives had the most negative attitudes toward Indians. About 20 persons on the lists of 62 prospective jurors were housewives.

Berman also said, based on the study, a person's sex appeared to have no relation to his or her attitude toward Indians. The most significant relation, he said, was between occupation and attitudes.

The questionnaire used in the survey was developed by New York sociologist Jay Shulman and has been used in the Daniel Ellsberg trial, the Gainesville, Fla., conspiracy trial, and the trial of John Mitchell and Maurice Stans.

The second witness called on the issue was Richard C. Peck, clerk of the U.S. District Court of Nebraska, who spent most of the time on the stand explaining the process by which jury panels are selected.

Peck agreed that the jury panel was more "out of balance" in numbers of men and women than ordinary, a fact he said was produced by "the luck of the draw."

Also pending before Urbom are requests to dismiss two of the three counts against the four men. Roger Iron Cloud, Beau Little, Wallace Little Jr., and Dale Red Boy, who are on trial.

The defense is seeking dismissal of charges that the men impeded federal officers and used firearms in the commission of a felony on the basis of a St. Paul, Minn. judge's ruling that illegal use of the military at Wounded Knee is a matter of law.

Press Conferences Set

Urbom has scheduled a press conference for 8:15 a.m., Friday, in his chambers to discuss the "future of Wounded Knee trials." Also scheduled for Friday is a 12:30 p.m. press conference for American Indian Movement national chairman John Trudell on the steps of the federal building at 10th and P.

Trudell is expected to discuss the cutoff of food stamps for followers of the Wounded Knee trials living in an abandoned Air Force barracks in Lincoln Air Park West.

Subpoenas Accepted By Nixon Personally

San Clemente, Calif. (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon personally accepted two Watergate-related subpoenas at his seashore estate where he has remained in virtual seclusion since resigning the presidency, it was announced Thursday.

The subpoenas, requiring his testimony for forthcoming trials, were served by a U.S. marshal at 4:10 p.m. CDT Wednesday, according to a Justice Department spokesman in Washington.

They had been issued more than a week earlier, but service was delayed while Gaylord Campbell, U.S. marshal for Los Angeles, made arrangements with former White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler for what a spokesman called a "professional and discreet" occasion.

Dignity Wanted

Wayne Colburn, director of the U.S. Marshal's Service in Washington, has been quoted as saying that he wanted the serving of the former president to be dignified, and that there was no urgency in the timing.

The first subpoena, delivered to Campbell Aug. 19, was issued by attorneys for former presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman, one of six defendants in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy trial scheduled to begin Sept. 30 in Washington.

The second, delivered Aug. 26, orders the former president to give a sworn statement Sept. 24 at Santa Ana, Calif., for use in a civil suit by a group of persons who claimed they were illegally denied access to a "Billy Graham Rally" at which Nixon appeared in 1971 in Charlotte, N.C.

Served By Representative

Campbell had said previously that he would serve the subpoenas himself in a "professional and discreet" way, but the announcement said only that the subpoenas had been served by a representative of the Marshal's Service.

The Ehrlichman subpoena stated the trial was to take place on the originally scheduled date of Sept. 9, but it was not believed that the legal document would be invalidated by a recent change of date to Sept. 30 for the start of the trial.

Ehrlichman was formerly Nixon's No. 2 aide. He will go on trial with former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman, former attorney general John N. Mitchell, former Assistant attorney general Robert Mardian, former Haldeman assistant Gordon Strachan, and former re-election committee lawyer Wells Parkinson on conspiracy charges.

Related To 'Dirty Tricks'

The North Carolina civil suit is related to the Watergate "dirty tricks" allegations.

During the Senate Watergate Committee hearings last year, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., produced a memo from White House aide Ronald H. Walker to Haldeman dated Oct. 14, 1971, predicting that "violent" demonstrators with obscene signs would be present at a rally scheduled for Charlotte, in honor of Nixon and the Rev. Billy Graham.

Haldeman had penciled "good," next to the underlined words "violent" and "obscene," and wrote "great" next to a remark that Graham would be a target of the demonstrators.

He also had approved at the bottom of the memo a plan "to prevent demonstrators from entering" the site.

The suit, for which Nixon's deposition is sought, seeks damages from officials for denying admission to certain ticket holders.

Okay Asked On Fund For Nixon's Expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration asked Congress Thursday to provide $850,000 for the pension and expenses of former President Richard M. Nixon through next June 30, including $40,000 for travel and $100,000 for miscellaneous.

The request includes some $250,000 not specifically enumerated under existing law.

Not included in the $850,000 is the cost of Secret Service protection for Nixon at his San Clemente, Calif., estate or the value of the former Western White House buildings that he is using as an office next to his residence.

The money would go to Nixon in two segments and includes a bonus of nearly $60,000 for staff salaries beyond what the law contemplated.

Nixon is entitled under the Presidential Transition Act of 1963 to $450,000 in expenses for the first six months he is out of office to provide for an orderly transfer of executive power. None of that need be used for salaries because he can, and has, received help from aides still on the White House payroll.

An additional $400,000 is sought under the Former Presidents Act of 1958. This law authorizes $96,000 a year for staff salaries after the initial six-month transition.

Although less than five months will remain in fiscal 1975 when the transition period ends Feb. 9, 1975, a White House spokesman said Nixon would get the full annual $96,000 for staff salaries during that period. That's nearly $60,000 more than if $96,000 were pro-rated for the shorter period.

A White House spokesman listed these categories among the budget being asked for Nixon from Feb. 9 to June 30, 1975:

- Travel, $40,000.
- Office Supplies, $5,000
- Furniture and equipment, $65,000
- Communication, $21,000
- Printing, $10,000
- Miscellaneous, $100,000

The $400,000 also will include the pro-rated cost for fiscal 1975 of Nixon's $60,000 annual pension from the day he left office. That is nearly $55,000.

A Nixon office and expense budget for each subsequent year beginning July 1, 1975, will be sent to Congress as part of the President's annual budget message each January.

Nixon can ask each year for any funds he wants beyond the $96,000 authorized for staff salaries and the $60,000 annual pension, but Congress must pass on the request.

The General Services Administration, which will write the actual checks for Nixon's bills, developed the budget after consulting with the former President. It was then sent by President Ford to Congress for approval.

A White House spokesman said that although the GSA handles the bookkeeping and accounting, Nixon would have latitude in spending the money.

He said Nixon could use the travel money to go back and forth between his San Clemente and Key Biscayne houses if he wanted, and he could use the $96,000 staff money to pay whomever he wanted, including his lawyers.

And The Driver Walked Away

Kent Burgess, 17, of Denver walked away with only minor injuries after his little car lost its battle with a big truck. The Burgess "Bug" was attempting a left turn when it was struck by the truck driven by Ralph Kinzer of Greeley, Colo. The small car was pushed 50 feet and wound up against the light pole, where it was nearly squashed.

Saudis Remove Gold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia has shipped home millions of dollars worth of gold being held on its behalf by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, a government report shows.

In its July report on U.S. exports and imports of gold, the Commerce Department said Wednesday that 516,577 ounces of gold were exported to the oil-rich kingdom.

International agreement has set the price of gold at $42.22 an ounce for transactions by nations. At that price, the Saudi shipment would be worth nearly $22 million. On the open market, the gold would bring over $150 an ounce at current prices, or about $77 million.

Officials stressed that the gold did not come out of the $11 billion U.S. gold reserves.

U.S. Federal Reserve banks hold about $17 billion in gold on behalf of other nations. The New York bank acts as a clearinghouse for international monetary transactions involving the precious metal.

New York Times News Summary

U.S. To Send Envoy
Washington — State Department officials said the United States and East Germany will formally announce Wednesday the establishment of diplomatic relations. The first American ambassador to East Germany reportedly will be John Sherman Cooper, a former Republican senator from Kentucky, who also had been ambassador to India. This will leave Canada as the only member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization that has not established diplomatic ties with East Germany.

Mexico Asks Support
Washington — A day after President Ford said the United States would act in concert with the Organization of American States on Cuba, Mexico's foreign minister, Emilio O. Rabasa, asked the United States to support moves in the OAS to lift the 10-year-old trade and diplomatic sanctions against Cuba.

France Offers Radar
Beirut, Lebanon — France has offered to provide Syria with sophisticated radar equipment to strengthen her defenses, according to reports in the press here. The daily newspaper Beirut said the offer was made at the meeting in Paris between the Syrian foreign minister, Abdel Halim Khaddam, and President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing of France.

Girl Wins Case
Newark, N.J. — Lori Paton of Chester, N.J., who, as a 15-year-old high school student, became the subject of federal investigation as the result of a classroom exercise, won her fight to force the Federal Bureau of Investigation to destroy all records pertaining to the case. Federal District Judge James A. Coolahan ordered the records "removed from custody of the government and destroyed." However, he denied Miss Paton's claims for $65,000 in damages.

4,000 Guns Sold
Baltimore (WSN) — An unusual experiment aimed at removing guns from the street exchange for a $50 bounty produced 4,000 guns in a week, and citizens have taken home more than $200,000.

Ford To Test Congress
Washington — Roy L. Ash, the budget director, disclosed that President Ford planned to make an initial test next week of Congress's willingness to go along with cuts in the nondefense budget. He said Ford would send to Congress, under the new congressional budget reform act, "deferrals" and "rescissions" — cancellation of programs — totaling $20 billion.

Housing Leaders Disappointed
New York — Leaders in the beleaguered housing industry say only vigorous action by the Ford administration would provide a prospect for prompt recovery from the industry's severe slump. Some said they were disappointed that President Ford had not paid more attention to housing at his first news conference.

Appropriations Rise
New York — Capital appropriations, the money set aside for improvement of plant and equipment, rebounded strongly in the second quarter, according to a survey by the Conference Board. The nation's 1,000 largest manufacturers raised their appropriations by 39% to a record $16.29 billion in the second quarter after a decline of .8% recorded in the first quarter.

Sea Conference Produces Few Tangibles

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The U.N. law of the sea conference ended its session here Thursday and preparations began for a new meeting in Geneva to reach agreement on a global treaty governing use and protection of the oceans.

The 10-week Caracas meeting closed with few tangible signs of progress, aside from the optimism of some delegates that a sea treaty can be negotiated and become a reality next year.

The U.N. timetable calls for regional and bilateral meetings to work on issues prior to the Geneva session, which will begin March 17 and last through May 3, or May 10 if necessary. The resulting treaty would be signed next summer in Caracas.

The largest international meeting in history ended on a quiet note with a morning plenary session devoted to accepting reports from three working committees, hearing statements from regional groups and thanking Venezuela for its hospitality.

Many of the estimated 5,000 delegates and observers representing 148 nations already had left this tropical capital, where the session opened June 20 in a modern, 40-story apartment complex.

Conference President Hamilton Amerasinghe of Sri Lanka told the half-filled conference hall that "even before this session opened it would have been apparent to us all that the dimensions of our mandate were so vast and its substance so complex that there was little prospect of achieving any definite results during this session."

"There has so far been no agreement on any final text on any single subject or issue, despite the lengthy deliberations," he said, adding, that "most of the issues or most of the key issues have been identified and exhaustively discussed . . ."

"The stage of discussion in the form of general statements and set speeches must be recognized as definitely over. The time has come for active, serious and earnest negotiation."

Amerasinghe urged that nations restrain themselves from taking unilateral action on issues under negotiation at the sea conference, but admitted that it would be unreasonable "to expect governments to exercise infinite patience."

Several delegations, including the United States and Canada, urged on Wednesday that no unilateral action be taken before March on such issues as extension of territorial limits, arguing that such steps could jeopardize a sea treaty.

"Somewhere there must be a solution that will produce a treaty whose terms will be fair and just especially to the weaker nations and one that would be respected, honored and scrupulously observed by all nations," Amerasinghe said.

Paul Enge of Cameroon, chairman of a committee dealing with seabed resources, urged delegates to "return to their capitals with the issues and the alternatives well understood."

"We should return to the next session in a negotiating mood," he said, adding that "the large majority of the nations represented here can no longer tolerate a world dominated by a privileged few. That is the message of the times."

The most important accomplishment of the Caracas conference was the general acceptance of the need to extend territorial sea limits to 12 miles with the addition of another 188 miles of water in which coastal states would enjoy economic jurisdiction over living and nonliving resources.

But the United States, Russia and other major powers want guarantees that their vessels — both commercial and military — will enjoy unobstructed passage through straits which fall inside this 188-mile economic zone. Developing nations insist on the right to control such traffic through their zones.

Another sensitive issue is the question of who may fish and where.

Canadians and Americans, for example, have complained that stocks of salmon, which spawn in rivers and streams and migrate to the sea, have been adversely affected by Japan's distant-water fishing fleets and want provisions giving coastal states full control over fishing for such migratory species.

Several conference proposals would allow other nations to fish inside economic zones when the coastal state is unable to fully exploit its fish resources and fishing nations such as Japan and Norway insist that such a provision be included in any treaty.

India Plans To Absorb Kingdom In Himalayas

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi decided Thursday to absorb the tiny Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim into the Indian political system.

Her proposed constitutional amendment would reduce Sikkim's claim to sovereignty to little more than a legal nicety and leave it with almost the same status as Indian states.

The amendment appeared likely to arouse opposition from the Sikkimese king, Palden Thondup Namgyal, who warned last April that his newly democratic realm risked being swallowed up by India.

The king, or chogyal, was reduced from absolute monarch and living god to a figurehead by a new Sikkim constitution put into force July 7 by the kingdom's first popularly elected assembly.

The elections were forced on the chogyal by Indian officials running the 2,818-square-mile kingdom since April 1973, when antiroyalist demonstrations got out of hand and forced the king to call on India to restore order.

Pilots Press To Contain Brush Fire

Hemet, Calif. (UPI) — Firefighting helicopter pilots using night-vision glasses developed for the Vietnam war pressed for full containment of a 17,500-acre timber and brush fire Thursday. The U.S. Forest Service estimated full containment of the blaze by Friday afternoon.

However, a spokesman said the blaze in the San Bernardino National Forest which threatened a mountain hamlet and placed a dark pall of smoke over desert resorts, including Palm Springs, would not be under full control until sometime Monday.

The fire, started by an arsonist, was being battled by about 2,200 men working in 12-hour shifts along the fire's 34-mile perimeter.

Three firemen were hurt earlier in the firefight and one suffered a broken ankle.

The helicopters were used late Wednesday and early Thursday to drop water and chemicals on the blaze.

Your lawn needs food now even more than it did last Spring.

You may think your lawn doesn't need fall feeding because it's going to sleep in a few months. But that's not the way nature works.

Fall is the best time to feed your lawn, because your lawn is going through its most vital growth period. It's developing new root structure. And it's sending out thousands of new grass shoots to thicken itself.

So you can see why it's critical to feed your lawn between the end of August and late September. A hungry lawn can't possibly produce very much new root growth or thicken itself. Or even stay green as long as a lawn that's been well fed.

Scotts' Turf Builder gives your lawn the essential nutrients needed during this growth cycle. And it releases nitrogen slowly, as your lawn needs it, for up to two full months.

Scotts' Turf Builder Builds even the thinnest lawns into thick lawns. (If you have dandelions and weeds, use Turf Builder Plus 2. Effective weed control plus a full feeding of Turf Builder.)

Try Scotts' "Half & Half" Test.

Just feed your front lawn with Turf Builder, and don't feed your back lawn. If you don't see a difference between the two within a month, Scotts guarantees a full refund of the Turf Builder purchase price.

Okay Asked On Fund For Nixon's Expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration asked Congress Thursday to provide $850,000 for the pension and expenses of former President Richard M. Nixon through next June 30, including $40,000 for travel and $100,000 for miscellaneous.

The request includes some $250,000 not specifically enumerated under existing law.

Not included in the $850,000 is the cost of Secret Service protection for Nixon at his San Clemente, Calif., estate or the value of the former Western White House buildings that he is using as an office next to his residence.

The money would go to Nixon in two segments and includes a bonus of nearly $60,000 for staff salaries beyond what the law contemplated.

Nixon is entitled under the Presidential Transition Act of 1963 to $450,000 in expenses for the first six months he is out of office to provide for an orderly transfer of executive power. None of that need be used for salaries because he can, and has, received help from aides still on the White House payroll.

An additional $400,000 is sought under the Former Presidents Act of 1958. This law authorizes $96,000 a year for staff salaries after the initial six-month transition.

Although less than five months will remain in fiscal 1975 when the transition period ends Feb. 9, 1975, a White House spokesman said Nixon would get the full annual $96,000 for staff salaries during that period. That's nearly $60,000 more than if $96,000 were pro-rated for the shorter period.

It Means Little To Larry Ruble

MAPLE RIDGE, B.C. (AP) — When the Army tried to send Larry Ruble to Vietnam in 1969 he packed his paranoia, his nerves and his tranquilizers and joined thousands of other expatriates in Canada.

"I stayed in the cheapest hotel I could find on skid row. Boy, they didn't even ask what your name was," he recalled. "When I came up here I was really paranoid. I couldn't go 50 feet without looking behind me."

But for Ruble, things changed. He got a job in a bicycle shop for $300 a month. The Portland, Ore., native, now 27, opened his own shop in Maple Ridge southeast of Vancouver recently, and says business is twice what he had hoped it would be.

The amnesty question means little to Ruble today.

"In three months, I will be a Canadian citizen and I really don't have much feeling," he said.

"I might be a little different from the average American up here. I have little contact with other Americans and I have a lot to do. I don't even think of myself as an American."

But he said the general attitude is that nothing short of total amnesty will do, and that most of those who fled to Canada would not accept a term of alternate service as a price for return to America.

Ruble said they had that option in most cases, and rejected it, before they went to Canada. Larry's brother, sister and mother remain in Portland.

In his new family is a cheerful accountant named Gay who helped him open the shop and buy an A-frame house. Ruble says she has done much to settle him down and he misses little from his old life.

"I guess if my mother didn't come up to visit me, I might, well I might miss not seeing her. I miss some things. If I could, I would not go down to the States to live. But I would like to see the Oregon coast again and also visit some people down there."

Ruble said he's seen expatriates who couldn't make it in Canada.

"They were right back down on the streets in the foreign environment, loneliness and homesickness."

"I was aware of this problem. I fought strongly to mentally reconstruct myself so I wouldn't suffer," he said.

"I've made myself."

Amnesty? Saxbe Speaks Of 'Contrition'

RUBLE . . . prospers in Canada.

Washington (UPI) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe indicated Thursday that draft evaders willing to make an "act of contrition" would be welcomed back into society without a prison term.

But a group of war resisters' families sought to persuade him and Defense Secretary James Schlesinger that only universal amnesty will heal the divisions remaining from the Vietnam war.

Saxbe, interviewed on the NBC Today program, said he knew many men who fled the country rather than serve in the armed forces would not be satisfied with anything but full forgiveness.

The biggest problem, he said, is that "they don't want to make this act of contrition. They don't want to have to come back and say 'we were wrong.'"

"As a result, I don't think we are going to see a great many of them coming back under any amnesty programs even though the President is determined to . . . open the door to them," he said. "They are not going to be welcomed back as heroes and this is very disappointing to them."

Saxbe met with Schlesinger for 80 minutes Thursday and later told reporters their joint amnesty recommendations would go to President Ford Saturday morning, the day before the deadline set by Ford.

"We'll have a pretty definite plan," Saxbe said. "We narrowed it down somewhat today."

A group called "Families of Resisters for Amnesty" sought meetings with both Saxbe and Schlesinger to argue that unless blanket amnesty is granted "the nation will remain divided for years to come."

At a news conference outside the Justice Department, five mothers and two fathers of young exiles argued that they should be welcomed home without punishment.

Asked how she felt about the parents of men killed in Vietnam, Mrs. Eileen Todd of Lowell, Ind., said, "My sympathy is with them every inch of the way but just because they lost a son, do they want to kill my son and kill me along with it?"

John Tiller of Dante, Va., appearing with his wife Katherine, said, "My son is not a criminal. They (the resisters) are beautiful people who did not want to kill other people."

In his interview, Saxbe said "a small trickle" of men have been returning since the U.S. role in the war ended, and most have received short prison sentences or none at all.

U.S. Imperialism Blamed By Son

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Mexico said Thursday it will not negotiate with the kidnapers of President Luis Echeverria's 83-year-old father-in-law, Jose Guadalupe Zuno Hernandez.

The victim's son blamed U.S. imperialism, the Rockefeller and Ford foundations and others like them for whipping up a spirit conducive to such a crime. "The people and the government do not make deals with kidnapers," Atty. Gen. Pedro Ojeda Paulada said.

He told Mexico City newsmen that Zuno, a leftist and one of Echeverria's political mentors, was in poor health and needed immediate medical attention, and demanded his quick release. Ojeda Paulada's statement reaffirmed a policy established last October by Echeverria after other kidnappings in Guadalajara. Failure to pay ransom in some recent cases have led to the execution of the victims.

The attorney general's comment was the first from the federal government since Zuno was abducted Wednesday morning while riding in his car in downtown Guadalajara. It was the first time a close relative of the president was kidnapped.

Unconfirmed reports blamed the kidnapping on the leftist terrorist People's Revolutionary Armed Front, and said the kidnapers were demanding $1.6 million, freedom for an unspecified number of political prisoners, and a plane to fly them out of Mexico.

But Zuno's son blamed U.S. imperialism for his father's abduction.

"I do not think actions like this one are carried out by anyone else but the imperialists," said Vicente Zuno, 43, a Guadalajara lawyer. "This is an act of violence carried out by foreign interests and especially by American imperialism."

Zuno's son, talking to Guadalajara newsmen, did not actually say the kidnapping was carried out by rightists, but he blamed such institutions as the Rockefeller and the Ford foundations for fomenting a spirit in Mexico that would allow it to happen.

The son, who has a reputation as being far to the left politically, said his brother in 1950 denounced a "Truman plan" and a "Columbia plan" drafted "by American imperialists aimed against our national system."

"These plans were connected, and I think they still are, with such organizations with great sounding names like the Rockefeller Foundation and the Ford Foundation which pay off student leaders to destroy their nationalism."

Campaigning Democrats Urged To Stress Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressmen on the stump during the Labor Day recess have been advised to cite legislation dealing with taxes and the budget and other legislation and to claim that "Congress is exerting strong leadership in the drive for economic recovery."

The suggestion, in a package of speech materials made available to members by the House Democratic leadership, underlines the expectation in both parties that inflation, unemployment and allied problems will be major issues in the campaigning now getting under way for the November congressional elections.

President Ford took cognizance of the outlook in his news conference Wednesday, saying: "We are all in this boat together . . . I don't think making partisan politics out of a serious domestic problem is good politics."

Ford said polls indicate that "most Americans felt that our difficulties were caused by government action and that, of course, includes the President and the Democratic Congress."

But Ford also had some conciliatory things to say, remarking that Democrats "have been very friendly so far and very cooperative."

The Democratic speech material omits any criticism of Ford, but it does stake out a claim for leadership in the economic front by the Democratic Congress.

It lists among legislative achievements the fact that Congress gave Ford the legislation he asked for to create a Council of Wage and Price Stability "within days of the President's request." The council criticized by some Democrats as likely to be ineffective, has no enforcement powers. The legislation provides no authority for reviving mandatory controls.

Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss was somewhat less restrained.

"I would expect and advise our candidates to campaign on those issues which are most on the minds of the voters, and this could certainly include our very serious economic situation," he said through a spokesman. "We are prepared to cooperate in any steps President Ford may take to improve these conditions. But we have the right and the responsibility to criticize his actions or inaction when we think he is wrong."

The Democratic speech material indirectly recognizes the diminution of Watergate as an issue since Richard M. Nixon resigned as President.

One draft speaks of "the story of a hard-working and extraordinarily productive Congress that carried on with the business of the people while national attention was focused on more spectacular events . . ."

On strictly economic matters, the speech kit mentions, beside the authorization for the stability council, enactment of the budget control act to give Congress a better grip on overall spending and more say in setting fiscal priorities; a tax revision bill nearing completion and expected to be acted on in the House soon after Congress returns; a project for inflation research by the Joint Economic Committee to analyze the impact of federal spending, high interest rates, shortages and other problems, and a bill for economic development of distressed areas.

Prominently mentioned in the speech material also was the passage of legislation designed to protect the rights and benefits of participants in private pension plans.

Other matters in an "achievement check list" include enactment of a four-year farm act, progress toward enacting legislation to tighten campaign expenditure regulations, a $79 billion education aid act; strip mining control, now in Senate-House conference; trade reform, passed by the House and pending in the Senate, and legislation on behalf of consumers, children, the elderly, health research, housing and mass transit.

Ford May Call For Boost In Taxes In 1975, Not 1974

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — President Ford has no intention of seeking a tax increase this year, the White House announced Thursday.

J. F. terHorst, the President's press spokesman, did not rule out the possibility, however, that Ford may call for a tax rise in 1975 as part of the fight against inflation.

The spokesman said there were "several pragmatic questions" why a tax increase of any kind would not be feasible in 1974.

"One is that Congress is anxious to adjourn," he said. "It is in the final days of its session."

"There couldn't possibly be any tax measures considered by this Congress in the short time that it has on its own schedule," terHorst said. As a result, it would be "unrealistic" to expect any White House request for a tax increase or any congressional action on such a request this year, he said.

terHorst also said Ford was "very much opposed" to a lame duck session of Congress following the November elections to consider tax measures and other legislation.

When asked about the possibility that Ford would seek a tax increase next year, terHorst said it was a "little premature to announce plans for fiscal policy" a year ahead.

"I think we'll have to wait and see what happens," he said.

Council on Wage and Price Stability.

The President also named the seven other members of the council: Treasury Secretary William Simon, Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, Commerce Secretary Frederick Dent, Labor Secretary Peter Brennan, presidential counselor Anne Armstrong, White House advisor Virginia Knauer, and Roy Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

"In the near future," Ford said in a statement, "I also intend to set up an advisory committee to the council, drawing upon the best talent we can find in labor and industry. Let me re-emphasize, however, that the new wage and price council is not a forerunner of new wage and price controls."

Ford met with Butz for 30 minutes and designated him as chairman of the U.S. delegation to the World Food Conference in Rome in November.

There have been reports that Butz would soon leave the new administration, but terHorst said the appointment of Butz as head of the delegation means that these reports are false.

Preliminary Meetings' Dates, Locations Given

Washington (UPI) — The White House Thursday announced the dates and locations of 12 preliminary meetings leading up to the "economic summit conference" that President Ford has scheduled for Sept. 27 and 28 in an effort to slow down inflation.

The White House said the first preliminary meeting would be in Washington, starting Sept. 5, including academicians and business and labor economists. The second, also in Washington on Sept. 11, will include labor union leaders.

The others are:
Sept. 12 — A discussion of housing and construction problems in Atlanta. Sept. 13 — Agriculture and food in Kansas City.

Sept. 16 — Business and manufacturing in Pittsburgh.

Sept. 16 — Natural resources and recreation in Dallas.

Sept. 19 — Business and manufacturing in Detroit.

Sept. 19 — Health and welfare in Washington.

Sept. 20 — Banking and finance in Washington.

Sept. 20 — Transportation in Los Angeles.

Sept. 23 — Economic consultants in New York.

Sept. 23 — State and local government in Washington.

More Than It Bargains For?

Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. may stir up more than it has bargained for in pressing lawsuits relating to its personal property tax assessment and its refusal thus far to pay taxes for the second half of 1973 to any of the 15 counties named in the suits. In addition, some taxes owed for other years in question to some of the counties are being withheld while litigation proceeds.

LT&T, the biggest single personal property taxpayer in Lancaster County, seeks a reduction in the assessed value of phone company property. As a consequence of the legal action, 15 counties in southeast Nebraska are short a total of almost $1 million in tax revenues — $568,058 in Lancaster County alone. In the smaller counties, this could create a definite cash flow problem, and it could lead to a review by the counties of their present taxation and collection methods.

Regardless of the merits of LT&T's case, the company's actions could affect the entire utility field and beyond. Already the Lincoln firm has incurred the unofficial wrath of other utilities which, fearing the prospects of central assessment by the state and the possibility of supplemental forms of taxation such as a gross receipts tax, are interested in maintaining the status quo.

And counties faced with collecting tax money which is due them may be disposed to attempt to disturb the status quo by seeking legislative remedies for their problems.

They may, for example, seek an updating of the moss-covered laws on tax collection and delinquency which now permit the loss of significant sums of tax revenue because of drawn-out collection procedures. Counties, too, may feel obligated to review the methods and procedures of appraising the property of utilities and, concerned with the loss of property tax revenue, they may want to look to other non-ad valorem tax revenue sources. Efforts to plug exemption loopholes is another possibility.

Salutary changes may be in the works and LT&T, although not by design, may play a principle role in bringing about those changes.

Amnesty For Nixon

We don't think Gerald Ford is surrendering to partisan and personal loyalties when he suggests that Richard Nixon — the man who made Ford President and who is cut from the same conservative cloth — has suffered enough and that he might pardon Nixon if the former president is prosecuted for his part in Watergate.

Ford can't be unkind of the rather convincing argument that a president of the United States, because of the power he holds and the trust that is given him, should be held by the people to be more accountable than any one else for his actions. He must also have answered for himself the question as to why Nixon should be spared prosecution or punishment when others, some not so deeply involved in scandal, have gone to jail for their crimes. And it is certain that Ford does not accept the addled theory that mysterious double agents and left-leaning bogeymen conspired to drive an innocent man from office.

It is not easy for many to accept a double standard for Richard Nixon, a man who lied to the American people time after time, betrayed their trust and tried to enrich himself at their expense. The desire on the part of many to apply the same justice to him as was applied to others such as Ehrlichman, Magruder and Dean runs deep.

But the former president took a terrible fall, with his pride and life's work out the window and a place in history he must weep over. Ford, now being at the pinnacle of power, must understand what has happened to Nixon better than most of us.

And Ford understands that there are millions of other Americans who have not deserted Nixon; they only regret what he did.

It is an essential part of the healing process that Ford suggest leniency for lawbreakers who have become political causes — be they draft evaders or former presidents. Those who demand punishment for one and not the other or for both are of no help to Ford's humane efforts.

Facing Realism Of Prison

By MIKE ROYKO

CHICAGO — Every convict I've ever listened to has said just about the same thing. They were railroaded or framed, society made them do whatever they did. And, in any case, the justice was too harsh and the prison system no good.

So I couldn't believe my eyes when I recently got a letter from Raymond E. James, who is a bank robber.

James isn't robbing banks at the moment because he was caught and now is doing a stretch in a federal prison in Washington State.

Being in prison several times has given him a lot of time to think. So he wrote to say that he eventually is going to author a book on our system of criminal justice.

It should make remarkable reading if he gets around to it, because James thinks the reason we have a high crime rate is that judges are too easy on people such as himself.

"I suppose," he wrote, "that I am the only federal prisoner who is a conservative, Republican bank robber. Needless to say, my views aren't held in too high esteem by my peers of the moment."

He offers his own sentence as an example of judicial softness. "The judge stated in sentencing me that I was indeed a dangerous offender, and that he expected me to rob another bank at the first opportunity."

"Then he sentenced me to eight years out of a possible 20 years and inserted immediate parole eligibility."

"This, although he knew I had previously been confined 15 of the past 20 years for 13 felonies and four misdemeanors."

What would James have considered to be a proper sentence for himself?

"Had I known that I would have received a mandatory 25-year sentence for bank robbery, without any opportunity to negotiate a plea, there would have been no power on earth strong enough to have forced me to rob the bank I robbed."

"I gambled and, really, I won. Please don't get me wrong. Only a fool would consider eight years in prison as a prize. But compared to 20, or possibly 30 (which I faced initially before entering plea bargaining), it is indeed a blessing — however mixed."

"I have been in 58 institutions since 1943, including five federal penitentiaries. I know many bank robbers and have learned something quite common about them. They, like myself, are failures. But many of them think along parallel lines with me."

James says that too many federal judges are political hacks, who get on the bench through clout.

"The courts are ruled by recipients of political patronage, instead of devoted men of integrity elected by and for the people."

(He can't be talking about the federal judges in Chicago — not about Judge Bill Lynch, Mayor Daley's former law partner, or Judge Abraham L. Marovitz, the mayor's former Springfield crony.)

James also feels that society should stop wasting money keeping softies in prison — the white-collar criminals — and instead concentrate its spending on "treating and attempting to rehabilitate the violent 25% who do need incarceration, of whom I am one."

And he concludes with this cheerful message.

"Just remember, you and I have to face the unalterable fact that I will join you in 1978 — rehabilitated or not . . . willing or not . . . ready or not."

"And that judge will have to adjust to the presence in his community of this man he deemed a 'dangerous' offender."

"By the way, how about sending me a subscription to your paper. Grats."

I'm not sure I agree with everything James says. For instance, if we don't put white-collar criminals into prisons, where would former White House aides go to find the solitude to write their memoirs? And not all federal judges are lenient. I've seen some almost growl at the sight of a draft resister awaiting sentence.

But if James says that he deserved 25 years, I'm going to take his word for it. It is nice to hear from an honest man.

By RUSSELL BAKER

NEW YORK — Most of the debate about whether it is fitting to jail an ex-president is so high-flown that one feels a bit timid about injecting some realism into it.

It is with considerable diffidence, therefore, that I suggest that the whole debate is silly. Those arguing for jail say no man can be beyond the law, while those against it say it would be a terrible thing for the country to lock up a man who has been president and, anyhow, his unscheduled departure from the White House is punishment enough.

Nobody has yet asked the central question: Is locking the fellow up going to do any good?

In the case of Nixon, or any other ex-president, the answer seems clear. It will not. Therefore, prison ought to be ruled out.

If we look at the American prison system, the overwhelming logic of this conclusion becomes manifest. The American prison is primarily an educational institution. We send young men to prison and they come out finished criminals, just as we send other young men to Yale and turn them into bankers.

A constant supply of criminals turned out by our prisons contributes to economic health by maintaining full employment in the police and the judicial industries, enriching lawyers and insurance companies, keeping social workers occupied and supporting large government bureaucracies.

Offering the benefits of prison education to former presidents, however, makes little sense. To begin with, they will invariably be too old to profit from it and repay the country with a long career at crime necessary to amortize the high cost of prison education.

When I last saw the figures, the federal government was paying more to maintain a man in prison per year than it would cost to send him to Harvard. For an education as expensive as that, society is entitled to some assurance that he is going to be able to repay his debt to its prison-related industries.

The average ex-president will be in his late 50's or, more probably, in his 60's, before he even enters prison. By the time he comes out, his useful criminal life will be negligible. No insurance company in the land would bet against actuarial odds like those.

A secondary purpose of prison is to provide storage space for poor people. In the criminal, legal and judicial classes, it is an established principle that the less wealth a felon has, the more time he must serve.

This has the incidental political value of holding down the unemployment statistics, but the main reason for it is that poor people, as all the data prove, are far more likely to go into crime than the well-to-do and, therefore, far more likely to profit from the benefits of prison's criminal education.

Former presidents will almost invariably be far too well-heeled to qualify. If admission to prison were conducted like admission to Ivy League colleges, with a lot of hocus-pocus testing to determine the candidate's chances of succeeding, former presidents would be so obviously doomed to failure that prisons would reject them without the courtesy of an interview at the admitting office.

Does it make the slightest sense for the country to spend more than the cost of a Harvard education on men like ex-presidents whose very wealth must prevent them from ever making first-rate criminals of themselves?

Another secondary purpose of prison is to silence people whose political opinions are obnoxious to society but who insist, nevertheless, on airing them. Prison protects us from having to be harangued by people we disagree with. Timothy Leary, war resisters, black militants, nudists, practicing Christians and others of that stripe.

No man who has been president of the United States could conceivably qualify for prison on these terms, since no matter how grave his offense, we are not likely to concede that we could have ever elected a man of unorthodox mind.

When we consider, then, what prison in America is truly about, the question whether former presidents should go is easily answered. The answer is no. They are totally unqualified.

WASHINGTON — In a case with Watergate overtones, ex-Beatle John Lennon is being hustled out of the United States on a six-year-old hashish charge while more than a hundred aliens with similar or worse drug records remain.

The singer-composer's major problem does not appear to be his 1968 guilty plea in England to unwitting possession of a small amount of "hash." Rather, his offense seems to be outspoken opposition to the Vietnam war and false rumors that he was going to lead a demonstration against Richard Nixon at the 1972 GOP convention.

We have learned that Lennon's serious troubles with the Immigration and Naturalization Service, a branch of the Justice Department, began after Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., began to find him troublesome.

In early 1972, Thurmond wrote a note

Fidel Extends The Olive Branch

six members of the Organization of American States have opened embassies in Havana and more are to follow soon. The old fear that Castro would export his communist revolution has diminished, because dictatorship of the left is not as efficient as dictatorship of the right.

Another reason, which will provide the fig-leaf for the American turnaround, is that Premier Castro has been looking for the moment to drop his overt hostility, and the best moment is the succession of a new U.S. President. The half-billion dollar-a-year Soviet subsidy does not satisfy him; because he thinks he can do better in normal relations with Western hemisphere neighbors, he has been sending signals of amity.

In one of the most bizarre examples of diplomacy in a television age, Premier Castro has set forth a series of conditions about ending the freeze via a filmed television interview with news entrepreneurs Kirby Jones and Frank Mankiewicz. But that olive branch on film awaits sale to a U.S. television network; like a diplomatic note sent across the seas before the invention of the wireless, it makes its stately way to overtake events.

With your policy coming apart in full view of the world; with the express reason for your policy — the hostility of the Castro regime — now being removed; and with a need to show that you, too, are capable of "bold, new initiatives," what would you do if you were a new American president?

You would change the policy and be a hero, right? Only partly right; the way you handled it would make all the difference.

If you were to handle it Kissinger style, you would order up a top-secret National Security Council memorandum; you would dispatch your national security adviser to a secret meeting on a fishing boat within sight of the lights of Havana; and you would announce on national television, with a mystery guest standing in the wings puffing a large cigar, that you have ended the threat 90 miles from our shores that plagued three previous presidents.

That would be The Easy Way, and it is to be shunned if we are to create a foreign policy to advance our interests rather than to interest our advance men. There is no need to follow the Nixon shokkus in Japan with any Ford choques in Latin America.

Former Assistant Secretary of State Sol Linowitz, heading an independent committee to pave the way for U.S.-Cuban relations, says: "The greatest irony would be to take such a step in a way that would alienate the very Latin American leaders who want us to take that step."

Neither our Latin American friends nor the American public needs another twist of fait accompli. We can let the nations of O.A.S. dicker with Cuba individually as we debate the pros and cons of establishing relations with Castro's government out in the open.

The Kissinger Foreign Relations Committee, formerly the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, would ordinarily be the proper forum for this examination of developing policy, but the committee members and staff are too hopelessly committed to promoting the restoration of relations with Cuba to permit a real debate, and too much taken by Henry's flattery to offer him more than a sounding board.

Is there a House Foreign Affairs Committee? Is there any forum, within or without government, that will call attention to the drawbacks inherent in any necessary change of international relations, pose questions about what the change will cost taxpayers, make at least a few moral peeps about encouraging totalitarianism, and suggest certain standards to be met before a deal is struck?

Our secretary of state, accustomed to dealing in secret with dictators, is now the agent of a President with a different style. He would do well to surprise us with no surprises, go public to make his case, and thereby use the fact of Ford's succession to turn the Cuban anachronism into our Latin American opportunity.

Beatle Lennon Sings The Blues

about Lennon's activities to his friend, then Atty. Gen. John Mitchell. The cantankerous but candid Thurmond conceded to us he wrote to Mitchell but explained it was an "informational" letter about Lennon, not one calling for action.

Nethertheless, action swiftly followed the letter. Leon Wildes, Lennon's lawyer and former president of the prestigious Association of Immigration and Nationality Lawyers, told us:

"I intend to prove the letter resulted in instructions to then District Director Sol Marks (of Immigration in New York) to disregard Lennon's other equities and to scuttle any applications he might file until after he had been deported."

The record indeed shows that within days of Thurmond's letter, a stay for Lennon was revoked and strict deportation proceedings began.

Other records at Immigration show

that more than 100 aliens with drug records have, unlike Lennon, been granted "non-priority decisions" which permit them to stay in the United States indefinitely.

Our investigation turned up aliens not only with heroin and marijuana convictions, but rape, murder, robbery, burglary, auto theft, perjury and even bigamy. All have been allowed to stay in the United States for "humanitarian" reasons.

In one case, an alien had six different convictions, including drug violation and rape and seven other arrests. Another was described in Immigration files as one of "the largest suppliers of marijuana and narcotics" in his area. At one time, an alien himself admitted to a "heroin habit costing $60 a day."

Compared to these, Lennon looks like a choir boy.

Unlike many other foreign stars who make big money in the United States and run, Lennon has begged for permission to remain here. His musical enterprises have generated some $50 million worth of business and brought untold tax revenues to local, state and federal collectors.

The legendary singing star has summed up his feelings about the immigration mess and his love for the United States this way:

"... Nobody came to bug us, hustle us or shove us, so we decided to make (the U.S.) our home. If the Man wants to shove us out, we gonna jump and shout, 'The Statue of Liberty said, 'come!''"

Footnote: A spokesman for Immigration chief Leonard Chapman said the Lennon case is being handled in a "routine way." Retired District Director Marks declined comment.

Dealing With Justice

Rocky has suggested letting the ex-President off the hook. Senator Hugh Scott has said that hanging is enough, without drawing and quartering as well, and that this reflected the atmosphere and mood of Congress and the American people.

Well, no one has come around and asked me what my mood is on this matter. But I can speak for myself and I say that those fat-cats scream about their rights and being innocent until proven otherwise, but turn a deaf ear to the rights of the people to decide for themselves. If it were put to a vote of the American people, I wonder what the outcome would be.

Nixon is suspected of committing offenses while he held the highest office in the nation. Then he resigned, and we are all to forgive and forget. Just the suspicion of such crimes brings dishonor, disgrace and shame to our country in the eyes of the world. I feel that the only way we can regain face is to proceed according to law and bring Nixon to trial on said charges. It will prove to the world that there is not one law for one group and another for others.

If we permit it to go by, I fear we will be opening the doors for others to attempt the same thing. The American people could become the victims of every underhanded deal imaginable. Ask yourself — is one man worth it?

Re-evaluation For Curtis

What would it have taken to convince Carl Curtis that Richard Nixon had been involved in criminal activity? Apparently Mr. Curtis didn't hear Mr. Nixon confess that he was involved in the Watergate cover-up, or else his lack of intelligence permitted him to blindly continue his support and defense of the President.

What if Mr. Nixon had attempted to convert the U. S. to communism and make himself dictator? Could he have convinced the Nebraska senator to support his action, as it would heal the economy and a strong leader could unite the country?

I doubt very much that the senator would have gone this far, but I do think he made a great error in his support for Nixon, and I hope he re-evaluates his position and realizes that it was a mistake.

Conflict Of Interest?

The newspaper accounts of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District on the 21st of August carried two puzzling items:

(1) Meisinger's Earth-Moving (owned by Errol Meisinger) has had a $24,351 contract with the district.

(2) The Executive Committee designated the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln, as the depository for NRD funds. (Paul Amen is president and chief executive officer of NBC.)

Both Mr. Amen and Mr. Meisinger serve on the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District Board. In fact, Mr. Amen is a member of the Executive Committee. One wonders if a conflict of interest does not exist in both these cases.

Even if these gentlemen did not vote to bring financial benefit to their company and bank, their presence on the board surely put some pressure on their fellow board members to approve these decisions.

The End Of The Tunnel

Well, Senator Curtis is up to his usual verbal legerdemain in responding to the attacks of Ralph Nader. The issue remains whether or not a consumers protection agency is of value to the citizens of this country. He is implying that all government bureaus are evil and all business is virtuous. The IRS and FBI are both government bureaus. Were the corporate illegal campaign donations virtuous or criminal?

Few things in this world are all good or all bad or properly summarized in broad sweeping statements. In this case, if a consumer protection agency saved the people millions to billions of dollars, protected their health, safety and sanity, it would most likely be worth establishing. If, however, it were taken over by those it was supposed to watch, then it would be a futility.

It is therefore my belief that it should be established with satisfactory safeguards so it is not rendered impotent. In fact, if we had viable congressional representatives, such an agency most likely would be unnecessary.

We can be assured that Mr. Curtis will do all in his power to render it useless, as he obviously has tunnel vision.

More Than It Bargains For?

Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. may stir up more than it has bargained for in pressing lawsuits relating to its personal property tax assessment and its refusal thus far to pay taxes for the second half of 1973 to any of the 15 counties named in the suits. In addition, some taxes owed for other years in question to some of the counties are being withheld while litigation proceeds.

LT&T, the biggest single personal property taxpayer in Lancaster County, seeks a reduction in the assessed value of phone company property. As a consequence of the legal action, 15 counties in southeast Nebraska are short a total of almost $1 million in tax revenues — $568,058 in Lancaster County alone. In the smaller counties, this could create a definite cash flow problem, and it could lead to a review by the counties of their present taxation and collection methods.

Regardless of the merits of LT&T's case, the company's actions could affect the entire utility field and beyond. Already the Lincoln firm has incurred the unofficial wrath of other utilities which, fearing the prospects of central assessment by the state and the possibility of supplemental forms of taxation such as a gross receipts tax, are interested in maintaining the status quo.

And counties faced with collecting tax money which is due them may be disposed to attempt to disturb the status quo by seeking legislative remedies for their problems.

They may, for example, seek an updating of the moss-covered laws on tax collection and delinquency which now permit the loss of significant sums of tax revenue because of drawn-out collection procedures. Counties, too, may feel obligated to review the methods and procedures of appraising the property of utilities and, concerned with the loss of property tax revenue, they may want to look to other non-ad valorem tax revenue sources. Efforts to plug exemption loopholes is another possibility.

Salutary changes may be in the works and LT&T, although not by design, may play a principle role in bringing about those changes.

WASHINGTON — Nothing succeeds like succession.

The suddenness of President Ford's emergency, the delight with which he is widely embraced for the virtue of not being his predecessor, and the correctness of his demeanor have combined to create the atmosphere of success in which success is more likely to be achieved.

Consider the question of Cuba, which was raised and neatly sidestepped at President Ford's first press conference. Richard Nixon's personal dislike of Fidel Castro, along with Bebe Rebozo's passionate espousal of the cause of the anti-Castro Cuban refugees, froze U.S. policy toward Cuba — and, therefore, toward the rest of Latin America — throughout the period of spectacular "normalizations."

United States policy was — and, as the President indicated, still nominally is — to isolate the police state in the Caribbean. Everybody knows that the policy, like a bawling baby, is waiting to be changed.

One reason why: The quarantine is becoming ludicrous, since

He would do well to surprise us with no surprises, go public to make his case, and thereby use the fact of Ford's succession to turn the Cuban anachronism into our Latin American opportunity.

Beatle Lennon Sings The Blues

about Lennon's activities to his friend, then Atty. Gen. John Mitchell. The cantankerous but candid Thurmond conceded to us he wrote to Mitchell but explained it was an "informational" letter about Lennon, not one calling for action.

Nethertheless, action swiftly followed the letter. Leon Wildes, Lennon's lawyer and former president of the prestigious Association of Immigration and Nationality Lawyers, told us:

"I intend to prove the letter resulted in instructions to then District Director Sol Marks (of Immigration in New York) to disregard Lennon's other equities and to scuttle any applications he might file until after he had been deported."

The record indeed shows that within days of Thurmond's letter, a stay for Lennon was revoked and strict deportation proceedings began.

Other records at Immigration show that more than 100 aliens with drug records have, unlike Lennon, been granted "non-priority decisions" which permit them to stay in the United States indefinitely.

Our investigation turned up aliens not only with heroin and marijuana convictions, but rape, murder, robbery, burglary, auto theft, perjury and even bigamy. All have been allowed to stay in the United States for "humanitarian" reasons.

In one case, an alien had six different convictions, including drug violation and rape and seven other arrests. Another was described in Immigration files as one of "the largest suppliers of marijuana and narcotics" in his area. At one time, an alien himself admitted to a "heroin habit costing $60 a day."

Compared to these, Lennon looks like a choir boy.

Unlike many other foreign stars who make big money in the United States and run, Lennon has begged for permission to remain here. His musical enterprises have generated some $50 million worth of business and brought untold tax revenues to local, state and federal collectors.

The legendary singing star has summed up his feelings about the immigration mess and his love for the United States this way:

"... Nobody came to bug us, hustle us or shove us, so we decided to make (the U.S.) our home. If the Man wants to shove us out, we gonna jump and shout, 'The Statue of Liberty said, 'come!'"

Footnote: A spokesman for Immigration chief Leonard Chapman said the Lennon case is being handled in a "routine way." Retired District Director Marks declined comment.

Dealing With Justice

Rocky has suggested letting the ex-President off the hook. Senator Hugh Scott has said that hanging is enough, without drawing and quartering as well, and that this reflected the atmosphere and mood of Congress and the American people.

Well, no one has come around and asked me what my mood is on this matter. But I can speak for myself and I say that those fat-cats scream about their rights and being innocent until proven otherwise, but turn a deaf ear to the rights of the people to decide for themselves. If it were put to a vote of the American people, I wonder what the outcome would be.

Nixon is suspected of committing offenses while he held the highest office in the nation. Then he resigned, and we are all to forgive and forget. Just the suspicion of such crimes brings dishonor, disgrace and shame to our country in the eyes of the world. I feel that the only way we can regain face is to proceed according to law and bring Nixon to trial on said charges. It will prove to the world that there is not one law for one group and another for others.

If we permit it to go by, I fear we will be opening the doors for others to attempt the same thing. The American people could become the victims of every underhanded deal imaginable. Ask yourself — is one man worth it?

Re-evaluation For Curtis

What would it have taken to convince Carl Curtis that Richard Nixon had been involved in criminal activity? Apparently Mr. Curtis didn't hear Mr. Nixon confess that he was involved in the Watergate cover-up, or else his lack of intelligence permitted him to blindly continue his support and defense of the President.

What if Mr. Nixon had attempted to convert the U. S. to communism and make himself dictator? Could he have convinced the Nebraska senator to support his action, as it would heal the economy and a strong leader could unite the country?

I doubt very much that the senator would have gone this far, but I do think he made a great error in his support for Nixon, and I hope re-evaluates his position and realizes that it was a mistake.

Conflict Of Interest?

The newspaper accounts of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District on the 21st of August carried two puzzling items:

(1) Meisinger's Earth-Moving (owned by Errol Meisinger) has had a $24,351 contract with the district.

(2) The Executive Committee designated the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln, as the depository for NRD funds. (Paul Amen is president and chief executive officer of NBC.)

Both Mr. Amen and Mr. Meisinger serve on the Lower Platte South Natural Resource District Board. In fact, Mr. Amen is a member of the Executive Committee. One wonders if a conflict of interest does not exist in both these cases.

Even if these gentlemen did not vote to bring financial benefit to their company and bank, their presence on the board surely put some pressure on their fellow board members to approve these decisions.

The End Of The Tunnel

Well, Senator Curtis is up to his usual verbal legerdemain in responding to the attacks of Ralph Nader. The issue remains whether or not a consumers protection agency is of value to the citizens of this country. He is implying that all government bureaus are evil and all business is virtuous. The IRS and FBI are both government bureaus. Were the corporate illegal campaign donations virtuous or criminal?

Few things in this world are all good or all bad or properly summarized in broad sweeping statements. In this case, if a consumer protection agency saved the people millions to billions of dollars, protected their health, safety and sanity, it would most likely be worth establishing. If, however, it were taken over by those it was supposed to watch, then it would be a futility.

It is therefore my belief that it should be established with satisfactory safeguards so it is not rendered impotent. In fact, if we had viable congressional representatives, such an agency most likely would be unnecessary.

We can be assured that Mr. Curtis will do all in his power to render it useless, as he obviously has tunnel vision.

By The Associated Press
Omaha (AP) — Twenty-five per cent of the local mortgage and housing industry may be out of business by next summer if Nebraska's 9% usury law isn't changed, the president of the U.S. National Bank said Wednesday.

Kermit Hansen told an overflow crowd at the Eppley Conference Center on the University of Nebraska at Omaha campus that the housing industry and individual agriculture operations are in "very serious trouble."

Hansen was one of a parade of witnesses — testifying before a subcommittee of the Legislature's Executive Board examining the usury problem — who urged quick changes in the law.

Chuck Rasmussen of Western Securities in Omaha said Nebraska "is suffering a housing recession" caused by lack of mortgage money. He blamed the situation on the usury law and called for its repeal.

Roger Aulabaugh, president of the Omaha Board of Realtors, said the public simply can't "buy or sell" homes freely under the current usury law.

Omaha homebuilder Barry Larson said his industry "is being killed. We need help."

Omaha attorney Steve Riekes told the senators that the current statute is vague and confusing. "If a seller has to raise the price of a home to be able to pay the (mortgage) points, is that usury? It might very well be."

Hansen was told by State Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha that the legislature likely wouldn't be able to complete action raising the interest ceiling for loans to individuals and partnerships until next May or June... and then has no assurance that a change would not be vetoed by Gov. J. James Exon.

Hansen replied that if it takes that long, "I could conservatively predict that 25 per cent of the (housing industry) people here could be kaput."

Asked by a member of the audience why a special legislative session could not be called to consider the problem immediately, Hansen replied: "Politics. There's an election campaign going on."

Hansen suggested a 12 per cent credit limit or no limit at all be placed on mortgages. He said he favored a "free market" on loans, which drew loud applause.

Frank Starr, president of the Omaha National Bank, said "we need to bring money into the state for agriculture and business."

Starr said his bank is "buying" $140 million daily at an interest rate of 12.8 per cent. "When you're loaning it out at 9 per cent it's awfully hard to make money; it takes an awful lot of volume."

Starr also pointed out that extending the usury limit would not affect small consumer loans because there already are other Nebraska laws dealing with such credit arrangements.

Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg, vice chairman of the legislature's Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee, said the feeling of his panel is: "We don't need any more studies, what we need is action."

Duis said he asked for a special session on the usury limit last year, but was told by Gov. Exon that the problem was not serious enough at that time.

Duis suggested the state might adopt a variable interest rate to cope with rapidly climbing interest. He also suggested establishment of a state reserve board that would set maximum interest rates.

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha, who chaired the hearing, said the subcommittee is trying to find out if people who need to borrow money to buy a house, cattle or seed for crops are able to get it.

To repeated questions about a special session, Goodrich said he had talked to a number of senators. "I wouldn't bet a nickel that we could get a special session. There will not be a special session."

Goodrich said the subcommittee will hold another public hearing on the interest rate 1:30 p.m., Sept. 13, at the Capitol Building in Lincoln.

Several of the senators bridled at the enthusiasm of the audience, which applauded loudly several times. Sen. Mahoney said such enthusiasm came from "far more radical" groups and added he was "disappointed" with the discipline of the audience.

Potter (AP) — A California couple was killed early Thursday in a head-on collision four miles east of here on Highway 30.

The Nebraska State Patrol said Kenneth Hartman, 25, and his 26-year-old wife Linda, of South Laguna Beach, Calif., were eastbound when they crossed the center line hitting a westbound semi-trailer truck. They were dead at the scene.

The driver of the truck, 29-year-old Dennis Maher of Omaha, was not hurt. A relief driver was also not hurt.

The accident occurred at 2:30 a.m. Thursday morning.

The deaths raised the 1974 Nebraska traffic fatality toll to 254, compared with 268 on this date last year.

Inflated Book Bill Shocks Principal

Strang (AP) — For a time last week, Mrs. Shirley Brunkow, principal at the Strang School, felt like inflation had "really lowered the boom" on the school district.

Mrs. Brunkow ordered 10 reading books for her kindergarten through fourth-grade pupils.

When the shipment arrived, it was accompanied by a bill for $7,330 and a freight bill for $163.80.

The shipment included 106 cartons containing 5,065 readers — slightly more than Mrs. Brunkow's needs.

The Chicago-based text supplier, red-faced, explained that an order filler had added the totals of the book serial numbers instead of the books desired.

A shipper picked up 5,065 books for the return trip to Chicago.

Party Leaders Favor Ford Economic Plan

Omaha (AP) — The state chairmen of both the Republican and Democratic parties reacted favorably Thursday to comments made by President Ford in his Wednesday news conference.

State Democratic Chairman Dick White said he viewed with favor the possibility of the creation of a program of public service jobs to help reduce unemployment.

White said "unemployment has risen pretty steadily in Omaha and there are jobs I'm sure that people could be doing. The federal money would be very helpful, I suppose, in certain areas. It wouldn't be a matter of just creating jobs. It would be a matter of filling jobs that might not be filled otherwise."

State Republican Chairman Bill Barrett said he also backed the public service job proposal. He said, "This has been intimated in recent days, so it came as no great surprise to me. I think in the interest of preventing a major recession, apparently President Ford's advisers feel that this is necessary and I would certainly yield to their wisdom at this point."

On the proposed federal budget cut, White said that "almost every project now — highways, a lot of other projects, almost every city project — is done through revenue sharing and matching." This, White said, could mean a big impact on Nebraska.

Barrett said, "I don't see that a major budget cut of this kind would affect the State of Nebraska that much. I have a feeling that areas of defense, etc., might feel the scalpel a bit more than those of us in the State of Nebraska."

White applauded the decision not to return to wage and price controls. He said, "Obviously, the last time it had some very serious effects on the economy by dislocating certain areas, causing shortages in some areas and overpricing in some areas."

He said that people "seem depressed. They need something to assure them that there's going to be more stability in prices and more of an economic future in the country."

Referring to the possibility of a Ford-Rockefeller Republican ticket in 1976, Barrett said, "I see President Ford and Mr. Rockefeller as being an excellent team for the present. I do feel that the appointment (of Rockefeller) was made for now, that is the present, and I don't think that he's suggesting that 1976 would necessarily mean a team of Ford and Rockefeller."

Barrett said he doubted Rockefeller would be nominated in 1976, at least not without a lot of thought. He said, "I don't consider him necessarily the weak link, but I am suggesting that Mr. Ford selected Mr. Rockefeller for the immediate crisis that is upon us, that is the economy."

Burglary Nets $300 In Cash At IGA Store

About $300 in cash was taken in a burglary at the IGA grocery store in Raymond, according to sheriff's reports.

Deputies said the burglar or burglars apparently broke a plate glass door in the store early Tuesday morning, then smashed open the cash register and took the money.

Damage to the store and the cash register totaled $725, according to sheriff's reports.

Switch To Education Complete

Cedar Rapids (AP) — It's been 10 years since Waldron Heany left the farm. And, as he embarked on his sixth year of teaching and third year here as junior high principal, Heany said, "I have no regrets."

He still maintains an active tie with the land. Selling some seed corn on the side, with the help of his wife, Eileen, Heany keeps in touch with the people of the soil in this community where he farmed for 20 years before deciding he wanted to change careers.

Why at the age of 43 would a man swap his lifelong occupation for something else?

"I liked farming and, along with my brother, we were doing quite well at it," Heany said.

"But surpluses of farm commodities were piling up in the early '60s and I felt since there was a scarcity of teachers then, I could be of more benefit to society in education," Heany explained.

"My son, Terry, graduated from high school in 1964 and since he had a scholarship to Hastings College, I thought I'd join him there," Heany recalled.

College wasn't something new to the farmer. He had three semesters at Wayne State before the military called his brother to service following the outbreak of World War II. So Heany went back to the farm to take the place of his brother.

It was his wife who was doing the teaching after the Heanys' marriage in 1944. She taught in and around Primrose. When the family moved to Hastings, Mrs. Heany helped out her husband by working as a para-professional at Hastings High School.

Heany decided to major in mathematics. "Math had always been my favorite subject and since Terry was in it, too, I thought working together would be beneficial," Heany said.

Father and son received degrees together four years later. Although a couple of summers had been spent back at the farm during college, the break was nearly complete when Heany started as a math teacher in the Kenesaw school system. His daughter, Connie, was a student at Hastings and the Kenesaw job kept the family close together.

After a couple years there, Heany received an assistantship to work on his master's degree in math at Kearney State. Terry was taking classes at the University of Nebraska at Omaha while teaching in Bennington and both father and son received advanced degrees at the same time, only this time at different schools.

"In the summer of 1972, I knew I was going to need some extra courses in order to take the principal's job at Cedar Rapids," Heany said, "so the 180 acres I had held onto for those summers went to my nephew." The break was complete.

Hickman Woman Clipped Of $1,500

A 50-year-old Hickman woman was swindled out of $1,500 by two young women performing the con artist's classic "pigeon drop."

The Hickman woman said she was approached while shopping Wednesday in the Gateway Shopping Center by a young woman who told her a "terrible thing" had happened, that her friend had found an envelope containing $20,000 in cash.

Another woman joined the couple shortly and showed an envelope containing a $1,000 bill and other bills. A white card in the envelope stated, "Brother, please deposit this $20,000 in my Swiss bank account as the FBI are after me."

After some discussion, one of the women left to "talk to her employer." She returned with the advice that the three could split the money and avoid paying income tax by claiming it was an investment dividend.

To do that, however, the woman said, they would have to record the serial numbers of paper currency put up by the woman, apparently as the "investment."

The Hickman woman returned to her home to get $500 in cash and withdrew $1,000 from her bank account. She gave the cash to the two women who left to record the serial numbers.

After waiting an hour in a drugstore luncheonette, the Hickman woman said, she began to suspect that something was wrong.

One of the women, using the name Connie Harper, was described as white, about 25 years old, 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weighing about 185 pounds, with reddish-brown hair and wearing a green dress, a plaid parka with a hood and blue tennis shoes.

The other woman was described as white, about 25, 105 pounds, 5 feet, with short black hair and wearing a blue and white polka dot dress and tan shoes. Police said she used the name of Diane Dumas.

'White Cross' Pills Popular With W. Omaha Teens

Omaha (AP) — Police informants say that "white crosses," tiny white amphetamine pills that bring on high stimulation, have become the top drug of abuse among west Omaha teenagers.

Lt. Jack Swanson of the vice and narcotics unit said the pills have been part of the Omaha drug abuse scene for years, but the move to west Omaha teenagers has come recently.

A type of "upper" drug commonly called "speed," white crosses have become available in unprecedented numbers nationally in the past six months, federal authorities have told police.

"It used to be that a white cross peddler was known to be a pretty small-time dope dealer," Swanson said. "But we have solid information that the pills are available locally in lots of 20,000 to 100,000."

He said, "Speed is getting to be a bigger operation here, and elsewhere."

Federal narcotics agents have told police that white crosses are illegally manufactured in clandestine laboratories in Canada and Mexico and in a few locations in the U.S.

White crosses are attractive to young persons because they are swallowed rather than injected or snuffed, officials said.

"Because they are relatively inexpensive ($20 for 100) and easy to take, kids are deluding themselves into thinking they are harmless," Swanson said.

Though not physically addictive, white crosses can arouse an emotional dependence. Coming off a speed habit sometimes can be as traumatic as heroin withdrawal, he said.

Swanson said that speed users with habits of consuming between 50 and 60 white crosses each day have been arrested and are known by undercover officers.

Because they are "uppers," white crosses generally bring on hyperactivity, fidgeting and talkativeness.

"They talk like machine guns, and they can't sit in one place for more than a few minutes," Swanson said.

There have been no local deaths directly attributed to the use of white crosses, but the pills are nonetheless dangerous, he said.

"Any drug manufactured illegally without the supervision of medical authorities or chemists is dangerous," Swanson said. "There's no way to tell purity or concentration."

Swanson said his officers will be making raids and arrests of white cross suppliers in the near future. The seizure of more than 1,500 of the pills in a west Omaha apartment last Saturday night brought felony charges for three persons and sent six girls aged 15 to 17 to Juvenile Court, records show. Five of the six girls told police they attend Millard High School.

3 Sentenced In Fraud Scheme

Omaha (AP) — Three persons were sentenced in the U.S. District Court Wednesday in connection with an insurance fraud scheme.

James Kelly, 26, was placed on five years probation and ordered to pay $40,000 restitution to United of Omaha.

Jimmie Lee Herron, 35, and Mrs. Kelly, 22, were fined $500 and put on five years probation for aiding in a fake-death mail fraud.

The three had pleaded guilty to faking Kelly's death and collecting $109,760 from the insurance firm.

In 1972, Kelly worked for United in Guam but was discharged and later was reported missing after an alleged fishing trip. He was presumed dead.

His wife applied for and received the insurance money but federal authorities later traced the couple to Atlanta, Ga.

Organizations — They Exist For Almost Any Purpose

By E. J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

Think of anything. Chances are there's an organization in Nebraska to honor it, sponsor it, remember it or regulate it.

Names of about 600 statewide organizations fill forty pages in the latest issue of the Nebraska Blue Book, a statistical guide to the state.

Members seem to cluster in southeast Nebraska. Areas of interest are more widespread.

There's an American Association of German Teachers headed by Anthony Fung of Omaha; or the Allied Poultry Industries of Nebraska. Its president: Davy Crockett, also of Omaha.

Interesting Names

Eye-catching names include: —Ars Poetica, the official poetry society of Nebraska; —Angus Nebrelles, one of countless ladies auxiliaries the name is a combination of "Nebraska" and "Belles", implying women; —The Blizzard of Jan. 12, 1888, Club; —Nebraska Federation of China Painters; —Nebraska Society of Clinical Hypnosis, a group of dentists who educate themselves in a unique form of sedation;

—The Huguenot Society of Nebraska, whose members organize to honor their French heritage;

—Harvard Law School Association of Nebraska; whose members organize to honor a more recent time in their past;

—Sod House Society of Nebraska, whose members organize to honor still another time; and —Military Order of Lady Bugs, originally an auxiliary to the Military Order of Cooties, it kept going even after the male group disassociated itself.

2 Types Most Frequent

A random survey of the organizations showed the two most frequent types are professional and historical.

The American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, Nebraska Chapter, certifies its members after they take professional courses and exams, according to member Charles Thorne, of Lincoln.

The American Society for Training and Development, Nebraska Chapter, allows its professional members to share experiences and professional techniques, member R. M. McGaughey of Omaha said.

Members are industrial personnel consultants, he said.

"The name is pretty widely misunderstood," he said.

The Nebraska Society of Clinical Hypnosis conducts seminars for dentists who want to learn about hypnosis as a sedative, an Omaha member said.

The member, who asked his name be withheld so his comments don't look like advertising, said the organization is an old one in Nebraska but fluctuates in status depending on the prevailing attitude toward hypnosis.

Of historical organizations, the Huguenot Society of Nebraska had one of the smallest memberships with 60, member Mrs. Edith Epp of Lincoln said. All members must prove direct descent from French Huguenots, she said.

Mrs. Epp also belongs to the Daughters of the American Revolution and Colonial Dames of the 17th Century, she said. "There's a common base of loyalty, patriotism and historical pride in all those groups," she said.

PTAs Rank 1st, Card Clubs 2nd

Nebraskans belong most often to PTAs, second most often to poker and bridge clubs, and third most often to bowling teams.

That is according to a recent study by Nicholas Babchuk which showed this state's residents to be among the joiningest in the country.

Babchuk, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Sociology Professor, said the study indicated 84% of all Nebraskans belong to at least one voluntary organization at the beginning of this decade.

Some organizations, like the

Visit Productive

Dacca (AP) — Bangladesh Industries Minister Syed Nazrul Islam said on his return from a two-week visit to the Soviet Union, Rumania and Yugoslavia that "the socialist countries have assured substantial financial and technical aid to Bangladesh to implement her vital five-year development projects."

National Organization of Women, exist to promote specific interests; some, like poker clubs, are for fun. And some, such as professional organizations, are for both, Babchuk said.

People who belong to more than one group tend to limit their memberships to one of the three categories, he said.

Middle-aged people are most likely to belong to organizations. Elderly are least likely, he said.

One important by-product of group associations are their effects on members.

Many organizations offer support and group identification. They combat feelings of alienation, he said.

Blacks in Nebraska, for example, belong to proportionately more organizations than do whites, he said. It is so much more difficult for them to gain any status in society that they seek it in small-group memberships, he said.

Babchuk said European dictators Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler forbade organizations because groups frequently are "breeding grounds for dissent."

Babchuk said most major social changes originated in volunteer organizations, but most groups promote the status quo.

Power Company Sues Marketers

Boston (AP) — The New England Power Co. (NEPCO) has filed a suit claiming that it was overcharged by Coastal States Marketing, Inc., of Texas for a shipment of residual fuel oil last January.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court said NEPCO paid $23.75 per barrel of fuel delivered to its Salem Harbor generating plant at a time when Coastal States' average selling price was $12 per barrel.

Organizations — They Exist For Almost Any Purpose

By H. J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

Think of anything. Chances are there's an organization in Nebraska to honor it, sponsor it, remember it or regulate it.

Names of about 600 statewide organizations fill forty pages in the latest issue of the Nebraska Blue Book, a statistical guide to the state.

Members seem to cluster in southeast Nebraska. Areas of interest are more widespread.

There's an American Association of German Teachers headed by Anthony Fung of Omaha; or the Allied Poultry Industries of Nebraska. Its president: Davy Crockett, also of Omaha.

Interesting Names

Eye-catching names include: —Ars Poetica, the official poetry society of Nebraska; —Angus Nebrelles, one of countless ladies auxiliaries the name is a combination of "Nebraska" and "Belles", implying women; —The Blizzard of Jan. 12, 1888, Club; —Nebraska Federation of China Painters; —Nebraska Society of Clinical Hypnosis, a group of dentists who educate themselves in a unique form of sedation;

—The Huguenot Society of Nebraska, whose members organize to honor their French heritage;

—Harvard Law School Association of Nebraska; whose members organize to honor a more recent time in their past;

—Sod House Society of Nebraska, whose members organize to honor still another time; and —Military Order of Lady Bugs, originally an auxiliary to the Military Order of Cooties, it kept going even after the male group disassociated itself.

2 Types Most Frequent

A random survey of the organizations showed the two most frequent types are professional and historical.

The American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, Nebraska Chapter, certifies its members after they take professional courses and exams, according to member Charles Thorne, of Lincoln.

The American Society for Training and Development, Nebraska Chapter, allows its professional members to share experiences and professional techniques, member R. M. McGaughey of Omaha said.

Members are industrial personnel consultants, he said.

"The name is pretty widely misunderstood," he said.

The Nebraska Society of Clinical Hypnosis conducts seminars for dentists who want to learn about hypnosis as a sedative, an Omaha member said.

The member, who asked his name be withheld so his comments don't look like advertising, said the organization is an old one in Nebraska but fluctuates in status depending on the prevailing attitude toward hypnosis.

Of historical organizations, the Huguenot Society of Nebraska had one of the smallest memberships with 60, member Mrs. Edith Epp of Lincoln said.

All members must prove direct descent from French Huguenots, she said.

Mrs. Epp also belongs to the Daughters of the American Revolution and Colonial Dames of the 17th Century, she said.

"There's a common base of loyalty, patriotism and historical pride in all those groups," she said.

PTAs Rank 1st, Card Clubs 2nd

Nebraskans belong most often to PTAs, second most often to poker and bridge clubs, and third most often to bowling teams.

That is according to a recent study by Nicholas Babchuk which showed this state's residents to be among the joiniest in the country.

Babchuk, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln Sociology Professor, said the study indicated 84% of all Nebraskans belong to at least one voluntary organization at the beginning of this decade.

Some organizations, like the National Organization of Women, exist to promote specific interests; some, like poker clubs, are for fun. And some, such as professional organizations, are for both, Babchuk said.

People who belong to more than one group tend to limit their memberships to one of the three categories, he said.

Middle-aged people are most likely to belong to organizations. Elderly are least likely, he said.

One important by-product of group associations are their effects on members.

Many organizations offer support and group identification. They combat feelings of alienation, he said.

Blacks in Nebraska, for example, belong to proportionately more organizations than do whites, he said. It is so much more difficult for them to gain any status in society that they seek it in small-group memberships, he said.

Babchuk said European dictators Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler forbade organizations because groups frequently are "breeding grounds for dissent."

Babchuk said most major social changes originated in volunteer organizations, but most groups promote the status quo.

Power Company Sues Marketers

Boston (AP) — The New England Power Co. (NEPCO) has filed a suit claiming that it was overcharged by Coastal States Marketing, Inc., of Texas for a shipment of residual fuel oil last January.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court said NEPCO paid $23.75 per barrel of fuel delivered to its Salem Harbor generating plant at a time when Coastal States' average selling price was $12 per barrel.

RON GUSTAFSON

Nebraskan Will Study Health Care In Sweden

Ron Gustafson's office in the Lincoln Center Building doesn't harbor a crystal ball.

Nevertheless, the community health planner for the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) doesn't hesitate to predict what he thinks the future holds for this country in the area of national health care.

"It appears fairly certain that there will be some sort of national health insurance here" in the United States, he said.

And, as an individual who is vitally interested in the ever-growing field of health planning, Gustafson would like to be in on the action, when, and if, a comprehensive U.S. national health care program is begun.

That's why he will leave Lincoln Monday for a year of graduate study at the University of Stockholm, Sweden.

Gustafson, who has resigned his position with SeNHPC, couldn't have chosen a better place to go.

For many years, Sweden has been considered a pioneering nation in the realm of national health care.

"Through national social insurance, the Swedish government has provided a lot of services" for its people, Gustafson said.

During his stay in Sweden, Gustafson will study those health services, concentrating his effort on "maternal and child health programs."

"Perinatology" is the word that has been coined to describe Gustafson's special area of interest.

Defined "in a recent article in 'Saturday Review/World' as the 'New Science of Childbirth,' perinatology is concerned with the period of time extending from the conception of a child, through his or her early years, Gustafson explained.

It encompasses "a period of time, instead of a point in time."

And its emphasis is on the early detection of physical or mental anomalies that can hinder the development of a child.

Many such problems "can be detected during the first or second year of life," Gustafson said, adding that early detection may eliminate a good deal of suffering and expense later on.

In Sweden, "a comprehensive program for early preventive child care was begun as early as 1938," Gustafson said.

And, apparently, the program has paid off. Citing 1970 statistics, he said that in the U.S. there are 20.8 infant (under one year of age) deaths per 1,000 births. The corresponding Swedish figure is 13.1 per 1,000.

The Swedish program involves extensive prenatal and postnatal counseling for the mother, coupled with an ongoing screening and testing of the child.

Stating that the Swedish people have long "been more oriented towards prevention" than have Americans, Gustafson said if a national health care program is instituted here, that is the direction we will have to go.

"We'll have to get away from institutionalization as a method of health care," he said, noting that the high costs of such care have become prohibitive.

Provision will have to be made for preventive and supportive services (local clinics, outpatient care, etc.) "that will cut the costs of institutionalization."

"There are two ways to cut costs," he went on: Preventing physical or mental health problems; or detecting them early, so their effects can be modified.

Although perinatology has "taken hold in some areas" of this country, there's a need to develop it more, Gustafson said.

"In a way, I suppose I'm trying to get a jump on the system."

"It (perinatology) has just been a personal interest with me," said the Nebraska Wesleyan University graduate who has been with SeNHPC for three years. "It makes such good sense."

"I really haven't set any definite course of action," Gustafson responded when asked what he will do when he returns to the U.S. "I wouldn't turn down a good planning job," he continued, although he said he would rather be involved in a more "direct" program (such as serving as the director of a rural health department).

Right at the moment, he and his wife, Kathleen, are busy packing and "learning Swedish."

Gustafson — who visited Sweden once before, in 1968 — is looking forward not only to his classes (his tuition will be paid by the Swedish government), but also to the opportunity he will have to pursue one of his "outside" interests — the study of folklore.

And, "I have a lot of cousins over there," he said with a smile.

With a name like Gustafson, who would have guessed?

Nebraskan Will Study Health Care In Sweden

Ron Gustafson's office in the Lincoln Center Building doesn't harbor a crystal ball.

Nevertheless, the community health planner for the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) doesn't hesitate to predict what he thinks the future holds for this country in the area of national health care.

"It appears fairly certain that there will be some sort of national health insurance here" in the United States, he said.

And, as an individual who is vitally interested in the ever-growing field of health planning, Gustafson would like to be in on the action, when, and if, a comprehensive U.S. national health care program is begun.

That's why he will leave Lincoln Monday for a year of graduate study at the University of Stockholm, Sweden.

Gustafson, who has resigned his position with SeNHPC, couldn't have chosen a better place to go.

For many years, Sweden has been considered a pioneering nation in the realm of national health care.

"Through national social insurance, the Swedish government has provided a lot of services" for its people, Gustafson said.

During his stay in Sweden, Gustafson will study those health services, concentrating his effort on "maternal and child health programs."

"Perinatology" is the word that has been coined to describe Gustafson's special area of interest.

Defined in a recent article in "Saturday Review/World" as the "New Science of Child-birth," perinatology is concerned with the period of time extending from the conception of a child, through his or her early years, Gustafson explained.

When Feeding Time Rolls Around At Zoo . . .

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Animals at the Lincoln Children's Zoo may not have the daintiest eating habits, but they sure eat well.

Most of them have already become accustomed to Roger DiSilvestro's bearded presence invading their territories during the lunch hour. And the greeting committees frequently get a little rowdy, nearly howling him over to get at their daily meals.

DiSilvestro, the zoo's man in the kitchen, spends more than four hours a day preparing meals and performing all his kitchen chores — rounding up all the dirty dishes, washing food containers, chopping and measuring ingredients, and distributing food.

Food shopping and preparation is a headache, the zoo curator said. He goes through at least two loaves of bread and five pounds of horsemeat; 20 bananas and 25 apples everyday. And that's just a sampling of the ingredients that make up the animals' regular diets.

Each species has a diet of its own. DiSilvestro adheres strictly to his blue sheet which lists all the "gourmet" recipes.

The other diet is perhaps the most intricate, but the curator simplifies things by preparing it only once a month.

Included in the mixture are oatmeal, bran, milk developer, evaporated milk, ground liver, tomatoes and tomato juice, carrots and carrot juice, hard boiled eggs, orange juice, cod liver oil and horsemeat — all in just the right proportions.

His efforts rarely go unnoticed, for the others gleefully storm the door to their living quarters when they hear DiSilvestro's approaching footsteps.

The same holds true for the young coyotes and raccoons who often can't decide which bowl looks more inviting: they take a bite from one, step off, and grab a morsel from the other.

The coyotes get individual portions of canned and dry dog food, water — and cantaloupe, seemingly their favorite food.

Steering the chow cart along the meandering walks, DiSilvestro makes whistle stops at each cage.

Although he usually goes inside the animals' homes to make personal food stops — spending a while befriending each animal — the curator makes outside deliveries at the Gibbon and spider monkey cage.

That's a wise move, indeed. No matter how quick he is,

Colby, the aggressive gibbon, always threatens to be quicker and rarely fails to take a swat at an arm or a leg.

Colby has another mealtime trick. He plays fruit basket upset with his assortment of food — fruit flavored monkey chow, a variety of fruits, lettuce and mealworms. The obstinate gibbon prefers to reach through the chain link fence and take his meals from the ground, not from the heavy tin dish.

Each day when the curator has worked his way to Flamingo Island, he must jump the creek separating the island from the zoo proper. Were he to miss, he would be splattered from head to toe with a carrot-colored concoction: lettuce and carrot juice, dog food, bread, ground shrimp, wheat germ, cod liver oil, flamin oil, and keratin (which gives flamingos, roseate spoonbills and scarlet ibis their coral color).

From there, the daily feeding is a breeze.

The prairie dogs are left dishes of guinea pig food (the guinea pigs get some, too), rabbit chow (likewise for the hares) and sunflower seeds. The mynahs, known for their cat-like "meows" and their man-like wolf whistles, get ample feedings of guinea pig food, horsemeat, flamin oil, peaches, bananas and tomatoes.

DiSilvestro bypasses the owls, sparrow hawks and alligators. Those predators are fed their fair shares of rats and baby chicks early in the morning, he explained.

The macaws, not known for terrific table manners, get their daily ration of sunflower seeds and peanuts — which they shell, leaving the uneaten portions all over the floor of their home. They also get cucumbers, tomatoes and lettuce.

Most of the animals are fed only once a day, but the baby pygmy Cameroon goats and fawns are fed dry and evaporated milk and milk developer three times a day. They still go for between meal snacks, however.

And where do they go when the craving to nibble overtakes them?

Right to the rosebushes — for a leaf or stem or two!

Think Again

dear

DEAR ABBY: Bud and I are engaged to be married next Christmas. We've been going steady for over a year.

Bud is very jealous and has a violent temper, so we agreed that neither one of us would dance with anybody else.

Last Saturday night we were at a club having a real good time. I went to the powder room for just a few minutes and when I came back, Bud was dancing with another girl.

I just walked into the next room and joined a guy I knew I sat down and we talked.

Bud must have realized I had been gone for quite some time, and he came looking for me. When he found me sitting with this other guy, he jerked me up out of my chair and beat me up. Then he led me to our table and told me to sit there until he was ready to go home. Meanwhile he continued to dance with other girls. I couldn't stop crying, so I got somebody to take me home.

The next morning Bud called to ask some questions about our wedding and he acted like nothing happened.

Before I go through with this marriage, please give me some advice. Am I doing the right thing?

SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: Have some third, fourth, fifth thoughts. And then think some more. Unless you enjoy having your bridgework rearranged, postpone your wedding until you are absolutely sure Bud has learned to control his violent temper. If you insist on going through with the wedding, that "something blue" you carry is Blue Cross!

DEAR ABBY: I'm a guy, 14, but I look more like 18. My problem is that I hate to wear clothes. I know it sounds strange, but it's true.

We have a summer place on the ocean and I never wear anything in the house or in the yard when we go there.

I like to walk the beaches at night with nothing on. The few people I meet are young so they think it's sort of cool, but I'm not trying to act cool. I just hate to wear clothes.

My mother disagrees with the idea, but I see nothing wrong with it. What do you think?

NO NAME IN CONN.

DEAR NO: Whether you are trying to be "cool" or not doesn't matter. Wandering around nude at night in a public area can find you cooling off in the cooler. I vote with your mother.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MARK: Lose her. She has a "get" complex.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Humboldt Woman First Female B-N Brakeman

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Burlington-Northern's No. 100 pulled into the railroad's main yards. A young woman jumped off and threw the switches, jumped back aboard and rode the engine into the diesel shop. It was the end of the line for the Hastings-Lincoln freight train.

But it wasn't the end of the road for Cinday Burow, 20, of Humboldt. She had just completed her first paid trip as a brakeman, the first female to hold that position in B-N history and possibly the first ever.

Relaxing over a soft drink, Miss Burow said she became a brakeman because of her desire "to be the first."

Started Painting

She became interested in riding the rails when she painted box cars owned by her father's feed company in Humboldt.

Miss Burow started contacting the railroad last October, but it was only after "20 letters and 20 interviews" — one personnel manager sent her "to a guy that hires office help" — that she finally was called in for a physical examination.

In the interim, she was hired by another railroad, but that job was to work "the yards in Council Bluffs at night. I wanted to live longer than that," Miss Burow said. She also was holding out for a position with B-N. "They hadn't hired any women on the road and I wanted to be the first."

On 'Extra Board'

Now her name is entered on the railroad's "extra board." She is on call at all hours, an admitted restriction on her personal life, "but it depends on what you're willing to give up."

On her first run, she rode in the engine and was responsible for braking the train, checking the tracks, reading signals, throwing switches to put the train on the right track and making sure the train was in running order.

It is strenuous work, she admitted, undeterred. "I like physical labor," she said.

During her week-long training in Alliance, Miss Burow changed a 75-pound "knuckle" which holds two cars together.

"There's a lot of guys that don't see working with women," Miss Burow said, identifying the lone problem she has encountered since landing the brakeman job.

Apparently, neither do some of their wives.

"I don't want my husband riding with a young woman all night in the dark," said one brakeman's wife.

Asked whether his wife would protest, Earl Schriner, B-N engineer, replied, "I happen to be 65 and she probably wouldn't care."

'Wouldn't Bother Me'

"You would have to ask my wife," said John Walters, conductor. "It wouldn't bother me."

Many wifely concerns seem to stem from the lack of separate sleeping and restroom facilities aboard the trains.

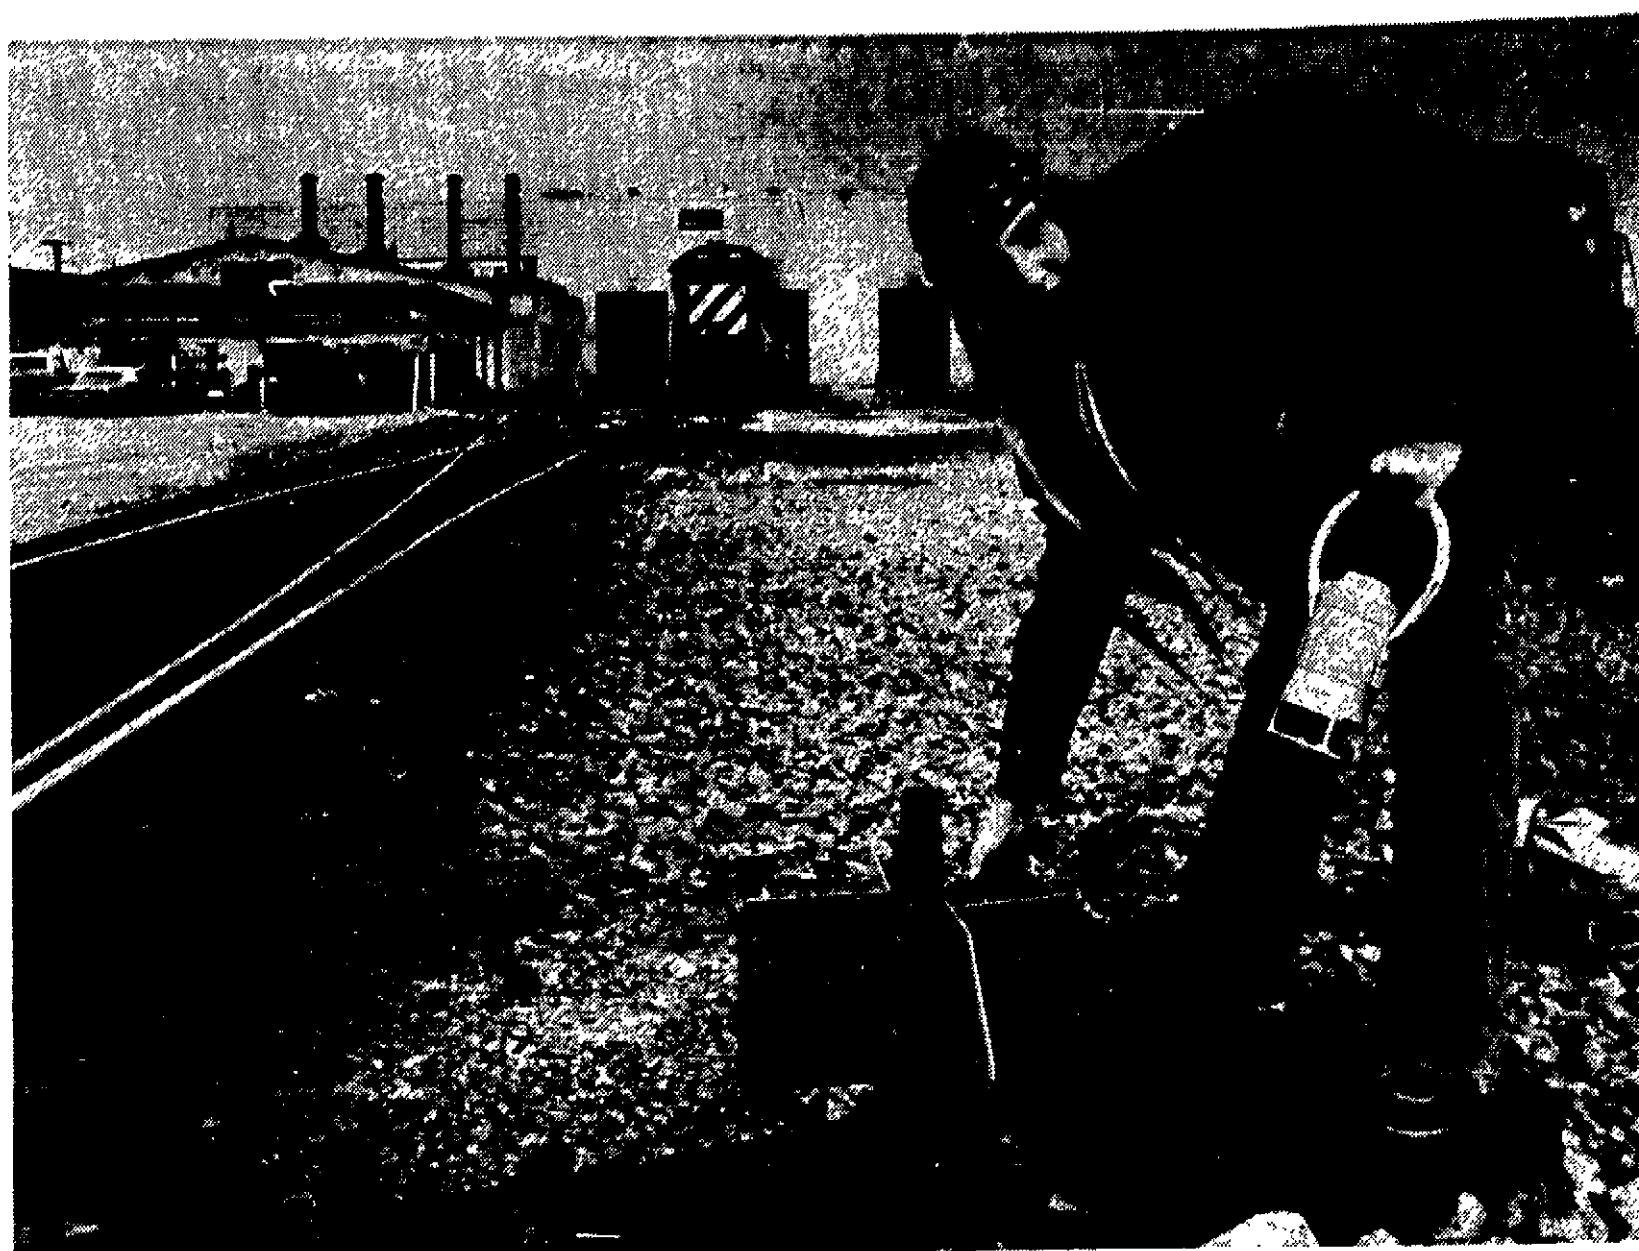

"When you're on a train, you're working," said Schriner.

In a telephone interview, Bill McKenzie, B-N's Denver region public relations manager, said it would be up to Miss Burow and the other brakemen to "work out their own bathroom problems."

The female brakeman said she has yet to use the restrooms. "They are bad sometimes," she laughed, adding she was fearful the lack of separate facilities was a breach of federal law.

Miss Burow has her sights set on being a brakeman in the local yards in Wymore.

Until a position opens there, she will keep on riding the rails.

U.S. Government Catching Up To Irving Math Teacher's Metric Lessons

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Irving Junior High math teacher Linda Bourg was four years ahead of her time. Now, thanks to President Gerald Ford, the nation's schools may begin to catch up to her.

Mrs. Bourg has been teaching her Lincoln students the metric system of weights and measures since 1970.

Last week, the President signed an education bill encouraging education "agencies and institutions to prepare students to use the metric system... with ease and facility."

The bill authorizes the secretary of commerce to spend $10 million a year for the next four fiscal years to implement that policy.

Parents Reluctant

"It's not going to be hard to educate the kids" about metrics, Mrs. Bourg said. "It'll be the parents who will be reluctant to change" from the English system of feet, gallons, pounds and miles.

Parents haven't been the only ones showing reluctance.

Although Congress in 1866 made use of metric weights and measures legal but not mandatory, more than 100 metric conversion bills proposed since have been stymied, including one House version this summer.

While the education bill does not tie the U.S. to metric conversion, gradual or otherwise, it represents the first formal government commitment to the switch.

When Mrs. Bourg, of

Malcolm, introduced the meter, the liter and the gram to her 8th- and 9th-grade students, she said they "weren't aware" of the system, other than that mom and dad told them "they couldn't handle it. It's too hard."

NEA Report

The National Education Association reports this statement made 54 years ago:

"While any intelligent child can learn and carry in his mind the whole metric system in three lessons, and any adult can master the same in one hour or less of serious study, no man ever has, and probably no man ever will, master the U.S. system of weights and measures."

The roots of the English system, Mrs. Bourg points out, are sometimes traced to debatable tales.

For example, the yard was the distance from the tip of the regal nose to the end of his beringed finger; the foot was the length of his foot. Despite the fact that three feet could be more or less than a yard, the length of both changed occasionally, depending upon who filled the throne.

The rod, according to another wives' tale, was the total distance of each of the left feet of the first 16 people to walk out of church. Yep, one rod is 16½ feet.

The U.S. is the only major nation now clinging to the English system, with other small nations such as Jamaica, Barbados and South Yemen.

Americans have already been metricized to a small extent, Mrs. Bourg said, noting the ad for the cigarette that's "a silly millimeter longer," and the family doctor's prescription of one c.c. (cubic centimeter) of a drug.

Rapid Translation

Other changes would take some getting used to: That confining 55 m.p.h. speed limit translates to a rapid 88 kilometers per hour. And "Miss Metric" sounds more vivacious at 914-610-914 millimeters than at 36½-24½-36½ inches.

If those inches go in any conversion, it will have an impact on the English language as well, Mrs. Bourg said. In 20 years, will blank looks greet the phrase, "He wouldn't give an inch!"? Will the guy who'd walk a mile for a Camel have to saunter a kilometer?

Besides the implications for the language, she said social studies students can learn the effect of the English system on international relations. It's been reported the U.S. has lost some trade because it doesn't deal in metrics.

Unions Opposed

Although congressional wooing of metrics has been met with opposition by labor unions, items on grocery shelves are beginning to appear with the contents indicated in grams and ounces.

"I think industry is way ahead of us (the schools) and way ahead of the government," partly to increase the export market, she said. "I think they're trying to educate us."

While science and math teachers are beginning to use metrics regularly, she said home economics teachers too are having to take note, as sewing patterns include both English and metric measurements.

Homemakers will have to buy hamburger by the kilogram instead of by the pound. And the old recipe books calling for cups and teaspoons may turn into antiquities.

Found It Easy

Last year at Irving School, Mrs. Bourg engineered one day of concentrated metric studies in most all subject areas. "Most of the kids really enjoyed it," she said, and "found it easy to work with."

This year, she said she'd like to expand metric lessons beyond math and science classes or a one-day school-wide mini-course, incorporating it instead throughout the year.

Meanwhile, she's giving her students practical problems, such as determining in meters the distance from the school to the Statehouse.

"I think they've got to be aware" of the terminology, she said, and asks them for the solution in adding two liters plus two liters, as well as two quarts plus two quarts.

Plenty Of Sources

While some materials for use in teaching metrics are poorly prepared or inaccurate, she said sources of good material are "almost becoming overwhelming."

Not easily overwhelmed are University of Nebraska football coaches, who said when interviewed by Mrs. Bourg's students that the yard on the gridiron is here to stay.

Consultants Urge Document Explaining Zoning Laws

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

If consultants updating the Comprehensive Plan have their way, Lincoln and Lancaster County not only will have a new set of zoning regulations, but a document to go along with those regulations explaining why they were adopted.

Cheryl Sylvester, an attorney with consultants Barton-Aschman Associates, told the City-County Planning Commission Thursday that both city and county zoning laws need redrafting and some restructuring.

Sylvester will be working with the county and city attorney's offices in reworking the zoning laws.

She also urged planning commissioners to compile a list of zoning policy questions. That list will be discussed at the commission's September meeting with Barton-Aschman.

Eventually, the policies formulated by the commission will be compiled in a document which will be used to explain each zoning regulation and to tell the public why that regulation was selected.

The document, dubbed a "compendium," will contain policies on:

— community development, which will deal with the overall rate and quality of development in the city and county.

— techniques and standards, which will tell governing bodies how to implement policies.

— organization and administration, which will cover procedures dealing with effective enforcement of the zoning ordinances.

— zoning district maps, which will locate zoning district boundaries.

The compendium also will aid officials in evaluating proposed amendments to the zoning text, in establishing criteria for granting variances from that text and in establishing criteria for zoning map changes, Sylvester said.

And as an added bonus, the compendium will be a useful reference for property owners and developers alike who seek additional information on zoning policies.

Figure Revised

In other business during the commission's monthly meeting on the update of the Comprehensive Plan, the commission revised the county-wide population figure which will be used in testing three alternate land use plans.

The commission updated the 304,000 population figure to 325,000, on the recommendation of Barton-Aschman consultant Bob Teska and Lee Sammons, of Hammer - Siler - George Associates. That firm has been providing economic data for the city and Barton-Aschman.

The consultants originally predicted two years ago that Lincoln and Lancaster County would have a population of 304,000 by the year 2000. Sammons said additional study shows that the population figure would be revised upward.

Teska said the 325,000 population figure is "a realistic control total for the county." He cautioned commissioners, however, that the figure is not a population projection, since it may be adjusted during the next year as the updating process proceeds.

The planning commission is directed by state law to oversee and approve the Comprehensive Plan.

Supreme Court Hearing Is Set In Cases Of Arbuckle, Casados

The Supreme Court has made plans to hear the cases of Leroy Casados and John Arbuckle Sept. 16.

The two men were arrested Jan. 15, 1973 in Scotts Bluff County after police stopped Casados' car and found what they believed to be pieces for a Molotov cocktail.

Both men were found guilty of possessing a bomb, and Arbuckle was also found guilty of possession of carrying a concealed weapon. Casados was found innocent of a similar weapons charge.

The arrests were made at the time of an American Indian Movement-Chicano unity rally in western Nebraska.

Casados was sentenced to a six-year prison term and Arbuckle got four years.

The men claim the law, which says all occupants of a vehicle are guilty of possessing a bomb found in the car, is unconstitutional.

Miss Richmond, an actress and stripper, was publicizing a revue that opens Monday at a theater in Picadilly.

She began her ride outside the theater wearing only a sequined hat, thigh-high boots, a gunbelt and a smile.

She soon caused traffic to stop, tourists to gawk and police to arrest her.

The police covered Miss Richmond with a blanket and took her to nearby Bow Street Magistrates Court where she pleaded guilty to using insulting behavior likely to cause a breach of peace. She paid $48 fine.

The sale is open to the public, and anyone may submit a bid. Payment for any vehicle purchased must be made by cash or check at the time of purchase.

State To Hold Vehicle Auction

The State Surplus Property Division will hold a state vehicle auction at 9 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 7, at the Department of Roads material building, 5001 S. 14th.

Among the items to be sold at auction are autos, pickups, boats, boat motors, boat trailers and air boats. The items to be sold will be available for inspection from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sept. 5, and from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Sept. 6.

The sale is open to the public, and anyone may submit a bid. Payment for any vehicle purchased must be made by cash or check at the time of purchase.

Miss Burow started contacting the railroad last October, but it was only after "20 letters and 20 interviews" — one personnel manager sent her "to a guy that hires office help" — that she finally was called in for a physical examination.

In the interim, she was hired by another railroad, but that job was to work "the yards in Council Bluffs at night. I wanted to live longer than that," Miss Burow said. She also was holding out for a position with B-N. "They hadn't hired any women on the road and I wanted to be the first."

On 'Extra Board'

Now her name is entered on the railroad's "extra board." She is on call at all hours, an admitted restriction on her personal life, "but it depends on what you're willing to give up."

On her first run, she rode in the engine and was responsible for braking the train, checking the tracks, reading signals, throwing switches to put the train on the right track and making sure the train was in running order.

It is strenuous work, she admitted, undeterred. "I like physical labor," she said.

During her week-long training in Alliance, Miss Burow changed a 75-pound "knuckle" which holds two cars together.

"There's a lot of guys that don't see working with women," Miss Burow said, identifying the lone problem she has encountered since landing the brakeman job.

Apparently, neither do some of their wives.

"I don't want my husband riding with a young woman all night in the dark," said one brakeman's wife.

Asked whether his wife would protest, Earl Schriener, B-N engineer, replied, "I happen to be 65 and she probably wouldn't care."

'Wouldn't Bother Me'

"You would have to ask my wife," said John Walters, conductor. "It wouldn't bother me."

Many wifely concerns seem to stem from the lack of separate sleeping and restroom facilities aboard the trains.

"When you're on a train, you're working," said Schriener.

In a telephone interview, Bill McKenzie, B-N's Denver region public relations manager, said it would be up to Miss Burow and the other brakemen to "work out their own bathroom problems."

The female brakeman said she has yet to use the restrooms. "They are bad sometimes," she laughed, adding she was fearful the lack of separate facilities was a breach of federal law.

Miss Burow has her sights set on being a brakeman in the local yards in Wymore.

Until a position opens there, she will keep on riding the rails.

U.S. Government Catching Up To Irving Math Teacher's Metric Lessons

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Irving Junior High math teacher Linda Bourg was four years ahead of her time. Now, thanks to President Gerald Ford, the nation's schools may begin to catch up to her.

Mrs. Bourg has been teaching her Lincoln students the metric system of weights and measures since 1970.

Last week, the President signed an education bill encouraging education "agencies and institutions to prepare students to use the metric system...with ease and facility."

The bill authorizes the secretary of commerce to spend $10 million a year for the next four fiscal years to implement that policy.

Parents Reluctant

"It's not going to be hard to educate the kids" about metrics, Mrs. Bourg said. "It'll be the parents who will be reluctant to change" from the English system of feet, gallons, pounds and miles.

Parents haven't been the only ones showing reluctance.

Although Congress in 1866 made use of metric weights and measures legal but not mandatory, more than 100 metric conversion bills proposed since have been stymied, including one House version this summer.

While the education bill does not tie the U.S. to metric conversion, gradual or otherwise, it represents the first formal government commitment to the switch.

When Mrs. Bourg, of

Malcolm, introduced the meter, the liter and the gram to her 8th- and 9th-grade students, she said they "weren't aware" of the system, other than that mom and dad told them "they couldn't handle it. It's too hard."

NEA Report

The National Education Association reports this statement made 54 years ago:

"While any intelligent child can learn and carry in his mind the whole metric system in three lessons, and any adult can master the same in one hour or less of serious study, no man ever has, and probably no man ever will, master the U.S. system of weights and measures."

The roots of the English system, Mrs. Bourg points out, are sometimes traced to debatable tales.

For example, the yard was the distance from the tip of the royal nose to the end of his beringed finger; the foot was the length of his foot. Despite the fact that three feet could be more or less than a yard, the length of both changed occasionally, depending upon who filled the throne.

The rod, according to another wives' tale, was the total distance of each of the left feet of the first 16 people to walk out of church. Yep, one rod is 16½ feet.

The U.S. is the only major nation now clinging to the English system, with other small nations such as Jamaica, Barbados and South Yemen.

Americans have already been metricized to a small extent, Mrs. Bourg said, noting the ad for the cigarette that's "a silly

Rapid Translation

Other changes would take some getting used to: That confining 55 m.p.h. speed limit translates to a rapid 88 kilometers per hour. And "Miss Metric" sounds more vivacious at 914-610-914 millimeters than at 36½-24½-36½ inches.

If those inches go in any conversion, it will have an impact on the English language as well, Mrs. Bourg said. In 20 years, will blank looks greet the phrase, "He wouldn't give an inch!"? Will the guy who'd walk a mile for a Camel have to saunter a kilometer?

Besides the implications for the language, she said social studies students can learn the effect of the English system on international relations. It's been reported the U.S. has lost some trade because it doesn't deal in metrics.

Unions Opposed

Although congressional wooing of metrics has been met with opposition by labor unions, items on grocery shelves are beginning to appear with the contents indicated in grams and ounces.

"I think industry is way ahead of us (the schools) and way ahead of the government," partly to increase the export market, she said. "I think they're trying to educate us."

While science and math teachers are beginning to use metrics regularly, she said home economics teachers too are having to take note, as sewing patterns include both English and metric measurements.

Homemakers will have to buy hamburger by the kilogram instead of by the pound. And the old recipe books calling for cups and teaspoons may turn into antiques.

Found It Easy

Last year at Irving School, Mrs. Bourg engineered one day of concentrated metric studies in most all subject areas. "Most of the kids really enjoyed it," she said, and "found it easy to work with."

This year, she said she'd like to expand metric lessons beyond math and science classes or a one-day school-wide mini-course, incorporating it instead throughout the year.

Meanwhile, she's giving her students practical problems, such as determining in meters the distance from the school to the Statehouse.

"I think they've got to be aware" of the terminology, she said, and asks them for the solution in adding two liters plus two liters, as well as two quarts plus two quarts.

Plenty Of Sources

While some materials for use in teaching metrics are poorly prepared or inaccurate, she said sources of good material are "almost becoming overwhelming."

Not easily overwhelmed are University of Nebraska football coaches, who said when interviewed by Mrs. Bourg's students that the yard on the gridiron is here to stay.

Consultants Urge Document Explaining Zoning Laws

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

If consultants updating the Comprehensive Plan have their way, Lincoln and Lancaster County not only will have a new set of zoning regulations, but a document to go along with those regulations explaining why they were adopted.

Cheryl Sylvester, an attorney with consultants Barton-Aschman Associates, told the City-County Planning Commission Thursday that both city and county zoning laws need redrafting and some restructuring.

Sylvester will be working with the county and city attorney's offices in reworking the zoning laws.

She also urged planning commissions to compile a list of zoning policy questions. That list will be discussed at the commission's September meeting with Barton-Aschman.

Eventually, the policies formulated by the commission will be compiled in a document which will be used to explain each zoning regulation and to tell the public why that regulation was selected.

The document, dubbed a "compendium," will contain policies on:

- community development, which will deal with the overall rate and quality of development in the city and county.
- techniques and standards, which will tell governing bodies how to implement policies.
- organization and administration, which will cover procedures dealing with effective enforcement of the zoning ordinances.
- zoning district maps, which will locate zoning district boundaries.

The compendium also will aid officials in evaluating proposed amendments to the zoning text, in establishing criteria for granting variances from that text and in establishing criteria for zoning map changes, Sylvester said.

And as an added bonus, the compendium will be a useful reference for property owners and developers alike who seek additional information on zoning policies.

Figure Revised

In other business during the commission's monthly meeting on the update of the Comprehensive Plan, the commission revised the county-wide population figure which will be used in testing three alternate land use plans.

The commission updated the 304,000 population figure to 325,000, on the recommendation of Barton-Aschman consultant Bob Teska and Lee Sammons, of Hammer - Siler - George Associates. That firm has been providing economic data for the city and Barton-Aschman.

The consultants originally predicted two years ago that Lincoln and Lancaster County would have a population of 304,000 by the year 2000. Sammons said additional study shows that the population figure would be revised upward.

Teska said the 325,000 population figure is "a realistic control total for the county." He cautioned commissioners, however, that the figure is not a population projection, since it may be adjusted during the next year as the updating process proceeds.

The planning commission is directed by state law to oversee and approve the Comprehensive Plan.

Stripper's Ad Stops Traffic In Picadilly

LONDON (AP) — Fiona Richmond caused a stir in busy Picadilly Thursday when she appeared riding a horse — naked.

Miss Richmond, an actress and stripper, was publicizing a revue that opens Monday at a theater in Picadilly.

She began her ride outside the theater wearing only a sequined hat, thigh-high boots, a gumbel and a smile.

She soon caused traffic to stop, tourists to gawk and police to arrest her.

The police covered Miss Richmond with a blanket and took her to nearby Bow Street Magistrates Court where she pleaded guilty to using insulting behavior likely to cause a breach of peace. She paid $48 fine.

RTSD Officials Praised For

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer
Lancaster County Railroad Transportation Safety District (RTSD) officials were told they were on the right track Thursday night when they outlined plans to reduce conflicts between motorists and trains.

Officials and businessmen praised the district's plans to relocate railroad tracks near the Municipal Airport and across heavily traveled West O. RTSD Director Marv Nuernberger explained during an informational meeting at Lakeview Elementary School that those two top priority projects may soon be under construction.

Transportation Bill
Nuernberger reported an important step was taken Wednesday to get the plans off the drawing boards when President Ford signed a Department of Transportation appropriations bill. As a result, Lincoln is slated to receive up to $3 million more in federal funds.

The RTSD has been designated a federal demonstration project and will receive 95% federal funding for track relocation and consolidation.

Nuernberger estimated the cost of projects will be $15 million. The first project calls for the removal of a one-mile segment of Burlington Northern (BN) track. BN trains would use the Union Pacific track.

Removal of that track would allow demolition of the BN bridge over Oak Creek, allowing the Lower Platte South Natural Resources District to enlarge the channel and reduce flooding potential to nearby housing developments.

Nuernberger said the removal of one track would allow the widening of Cornhusker Hwy. and improvement of the airport access road. The second project eventually would lead to removal of the BN track across West O.

Train traffic across West O has been stepped up during the past year as Burlington transported Wyoming coal through Lincoln. "As bad as the situation is today, it's going to get worse and worse," Nuernberger told some 70 people attending the meeting.

RTSD has a two-phase plan to solve the problem.

In phase one, Burlington would construct almost one mile of new track between West O and the Burlington yards to the south and build a new bridge over Salt Creek. That track would handle the eastbound coal unit trains.

In phase two, BN would construct more than two miles of new track between the yards and Middle Creek. That track would handle southbound coal train traffic.

If both tracks are built, the new lines would allow Burlington trains to pass through Lincoln without using the West O crossing.

Nuernberger said the RTSD's original plans did not include the West O project.

More Protests

But, during the past year increasing protests were leveled by West O businessmen and residents over the increasing train traffic, which blocked the street and stacked up traffic.

As a result of those protests, the RTSD worked with Burlington to solve the conflict. West Lincolinites are pleased with the action taken by the district, according to Ed Copple of the West O Business and Civic Organization.

Encourage Radial

Copple said elimination of that track will benefit not only the west side, but the entire city, since it will encourage radial growth to the north and west.

Engineer Nate Beezeley and businessman Don Bergquist also voiced support for both projects.

A number of officials also praised the district's efforts and pledged support to them, including Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf, County Board Chairman Bob Colin, councilman Max Denney, Lower Platte South NRD Director Hal Schroeder and Larry Worth of the City-County Planning Department.

Chamber of Commerce official John DuPont pledged the chamber's support.

Nuernberger said another informational meeting will be held in early 1975 to discuss other RTSD plans.

Marie's For Sale—She Didn't Know It

Within the last week, Marie Uher has put her house and tavern up for sale, ordered several $20 floral arrangements and called for electrical, plumbing, maintenance and television repairs.

And she didn't even know it. "Someone has done all this without Marie's consent, but she says it doesn't bother her—it's bringing in business."

The floral arrangements were her first surprise. All of them, each bearing a card marked "Happy Birthday Marie," arrived at her tavern, Marie's Oasis at 901 O, on Saturday.

The repairmen all showed up Monday, and Tuesday Marie began getting offers to buy her house. She has notified the Police Department.

The latest incident occurred Thursday when a sale advertisement for the tavern began running in Lincoln newspapers.

Everything has been charged to Marie, but all companies concerned have cooperated so far. She won't have any bills to pay.

Marie says she thinks the person who is doing this knows her. Whether it's a former employee or a patron, she doesn't know, and she can't figure out why.

"As far as I know, I don't have any enemies," she says. "But if they're doing it to me, they're just leaving someone else alone. It's probably someone with a disturbed mind. But I'm not worried—I'll just go home and say a prayer for them."

Parents Question Transfer Of Principal

By IVAN TRAVNICEK
Star Staff Writer

Secondary school parents and staff have the right to be involved in determining their school's philosophy, Lincoln Schools Supt. John Prasch said Thursday night.

"We think they do," Prasch said to the 27 people attending the meeting, "and our general goals say something about that."

The issue came up with the transfer this summer of Prescott Principal Bernard Nutt to Pershing Elementary. Nutt was in the third year of Prescott's multi-unit program—a program that takes five years to fully develop.

Nutt has said the third year is the most crucial.

Quoting from the general goals, Prasch said at the Prescott School meeting:

"It is a general goal of the Lincoln Public Schools to foster relationships with parents which encourage the home and school to work together toward establishing and achieving common educational goals for students."

"We would hope the school staff will share with parents their goals for the students, and it is our intent to encourage people to be involved," though he admitted, "It is one thing to state goals and quite another thing to execute them."

Parents and PTA members had felt the decision to move Nutt was made without consultation or prior warning, but Prasch explained that some school principals are moved from one building to another periodically.

Some Not Moved
Other principals are not moved frequently, Prasch said, because they have expressed a desire to stay where they are. He said Nutt was one of those principals who had agreed to periodic transfer.

Prasch was asked if secondary school parents and staff have the right to be informed about personnel changes in advance of a decision by the Lincoln Public School Board.

"I guess my answer would be no," he said.

Such decisions are not made without some warning, he said. Policy matters are routinely discussed by principals and other staff prior to board action and all board action on policy is taken at public meetings with a prepublished agenda, he said.

Formal Rotation
Several years ago, Prasch said, a formal rotation policy was discussed, but there was such a sharp difference of opinion in the schools' staff that rotation policy was left on an informal basis.

Prasch further defended his decision to move Nutt by saying, "You won't change a program existing at a school by changing one or two people, even though the new person may not be familiar with a particular program."

"We believe that some cross-fertilization by moving people around is good," he said.

Nutt's successor, Jack Ernst, formerly the principal at Meadowlark School for six years, has been a supporter of the multi-unit idea that is being installed at Prescott.

Prasch was asked if the school board has a method or procedure by which it can gain insight about the philosophy and general community attitude for each school in the system.

Depends On Staff

Essentially the board is dependent upon the staff for its information about programs at individual schools," he replied. "Other information is received directly from parents, students and other constituents."

He said the philosophy of staff and parents at a school is considered when assigning the school principal.

The accuracy of such past decisions was immediately questioned by one parent. Prasch admitted "we do make mistakes."

Boy Returns $13,000

Collinsville, Ill. (UPI) — "I would have liked to bought a new bike 'cause the brakes locked up on mine," Jimmy Conner said. "But they needed the money more 'cause their baby couldn't walk or talk."

Ten-year-old Jimmy is used to finding treasures on the road. "He's always finding things," says his mother.

Tuesday, across the street from his house, Jimmy found a box of disposable baby diapers and a brown paper bag. The bag contained $13,000.

Jimmy took it home and dumped it on the kitchen floor. "We're rich, mom, we're rich!" he shouted to his mother.

"I was absolutely stunned," Mrs. Jeanine Conner said. "The money was tens and twenties wrapped in plastic with masking tape around it with thousands marked on it. I called the cops immediately. I figured it had to be stolen."

Across the street, a young couple pulled in and began searching frantically through trash containers outside a motel where they had spent the night.

Police questioned the young man, Jose Gandaria of Mathis, Tex. He said he and his wife had sold their two trucks and had their life savings in a brown paper bag. They were headed for a hospital in Chicago, where their 17-month-old son was to undergo neurological treatments.

They stayed overnight at the motel and placed the bag and diapers on the top of the car when packing the next morning. When they pulled out, the diapers and money fell to the highway.

Mrs. Conner turned over the money and the police returned it.

"I'm glad we gave it back 'cause they needed it," Jimmy said.

The 39-year-old Tulsa insurance executive defeated Deniz Garrison in the primary and will meet either U.S. Rep. Clem McSpadden or State Rep. David Boren in the November general election. Boren and McSpadden will fight it out Sept. 17 for the Democratic nomination.

In his campaign, Inhofe attended nearly 275 neighborhood meetings and personally knocked on a lot of doors.

"It is a general goal of the Lincoln Public Schools to foster relationships with parents which encourage the home and school to work together toward establishing and achieving common educational goals for students."

"We would hope the school staff will share with parents their goals for the students, and it is our intent to encourage people to be involved," though he admitted, "It is one thing to state goals and quite another thing to execute them."

Parents and PTA members had felt the decision to move Nutt was made without consultation or prior warning, but Prasch explained that some school principals are moved from one building to another periodically.

Some Not Moved Other principals are not moved frequently, Prasch said, because they have expressed a desire to stay where they are. He said Nutt was one of those principals who had agreed to periodic transfer.

Prasch was asked if secondary school parents and staff have the right to be informed about personnel changes in advance of a decision by the Lincoln Public School Board.

"I guess my answer would be no," he said.

Such decisions are not made without some warning, he said. Policy matters are routinely discussed by principals and other staff prior to board action and all board action on policy is taken at public meetings with a prepublished agenda, he said.

Formal Rotation Several years ago, Prasch said, a formal rotation policy was discussed, but there was such a sharp difference of opinion in the schools' staff that rotation policy was left on an informal basis.

Prasch further defended his decision to move Nutt by saying, "You won't change a program existing at a school by changing one or two people, even though the new person may not be familiar with a particular program."

"We believe that some cross-fertilization by moving people around is good," he said.

Nutt's successor, Jack Ernst, formerly the principal at Meadowlane School for six years, has been a supporter of the multi-unit idea that is being installed at Prescott.

Prasch was asked if the school board has a method or procedure by which it can gain insight about the philosophy and general community attitude for each school in the system.

Essentially the board is dependent upon the staff for its information about programs at individual schools," he replied. "Other information is received directly from parents, students and other constituents."

He said the philosophy of staff and parents at a school is considered when assigning the school principal.

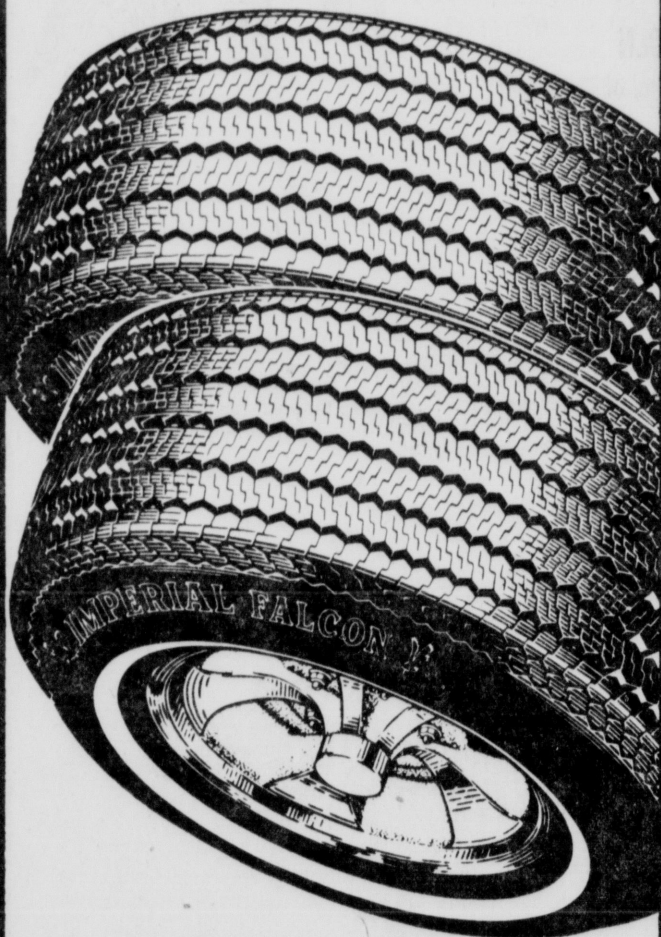

The accuracy of such past decisions was immediately questioned by one parent. Prasch admitted "we do make mistakes."

Boy Returns $13,000

Collinsville, Ill. (UPI) — "I would have liked to bought a new bike 'cause the brakes locked up on mine," Jimmy Conner said. "But they needed the money more 'cause their baby couldn't walk or talk."

Ten-year-old Jimmy is used to finding treasures on the road. "He's always finding things," says his mother.

Tuesday, across the street from his house, Jimmy found a

Tulsa, Okla. (AP) — If you're overweight, maybe you should run for public office.

Jim Inhofe, who won the Republican nomination for governor in Tuesday's primary, said Thursday he lost 57 pounds during the campaign and now is down to a trim 148 pounds.

The 39-year-old Tulsa insurance executive defeated Deniz Garrison in the primary and will meet either U.S. Rep. Clem McSpadden or State Rep. David Boren in the November general election. Boren and McSpadden will fight it out Sept. 17 for the Democratic nomination.

In his campaign, Inhofe attended nearly 275 neighborhood meetings and personally knocked on a lot of doors.

box of disposable baby diapers and a brown paper bag. The bag contained $13,000.

Jimmy took it home and dumped it on the kitchen floor. "We're rich, mom, we're rich!" he shouted to his mother.

"I was absolutely stunned," Mrs. Jeanine Conner said. "The money was tens and twenties wrapped in plastic with masking tape around it with thousands marked on it. I called the cops immediately. I figured it had to be stolen."

Across the street, a young couple pulled in and began searching frantically through trash containers outside a motel where they had spent the night.

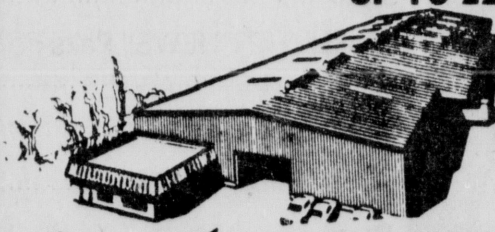

Police questioned the young man, Jose Gandaria of Mathis, Tex. He said he and his wife had sold their two trucks and had their life savings in a brown paper bag. They were headed for a hospital in Chicago, where their 17-month-old son was to undergo neurological treatments.

They stayed overnight at the motel and placed the bag and diapers on the top of the car when packing the next morning. When they pulled out, the diapers and money fell to the highway.

Mrs. Conner turned over the money and the police returned it.

"I'm glad we gave it back 'cause they needed it," Jimmy said.

Turks Charged With Violations

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The pro-Greek government of Cyprus protested to the United Nations on Thursday that the Turks broke the cease-fire by burning Greek shops, invading and looting a Greek village and forcing Greeks from their homes or taking them hostage.

A Security Council meeting was called for Thursday afternoon on the plight of a refugee population estimated by U.N. officials at 226,800 — more than a third of the country's population. But the meeting was postponed until Friday after delegates spent 3½ hours in backstage meetings trying to fashion a generally acceptable resolution from three separate proposals.

In asking the council session, the Cyprus government charged that the Turkish invasion army was expelling Greek Cypriots from the 40 per cent of the island it now occupies.

It proposed that the Security Council demand that Turkey allow them to return home and live under the protection of U.N. peacekeeping troops. If Turkey complies, Cypriot U.N. Ambassador Zenon Rossides said the Greek Cypriots would agree to let U.N. soldiers protect Turks in Greek areas.

Cyprus government protests against the burning of four Greek shops in Nicosia and the invasion and alleged looting of Athna, a Turkish village outside Famagusta, were forwarded to U.N. headquarters, a U.N. spokesman in Nicosia said.

Associated Press correspondent Alex Efty reported that dense clouds of black smoke billowed from the shops on Hermes Street in Nicosia, once one of Nicosia's busiest shopping centers but now a deserted no man's land between the Greek and Turkish sectors.

"Some young Turks broke into the shops from the rear side away from us and set fire to them," a young Greek Cypriot national guard officer said.

Armed Canadian troops of the U.N. peace force sought to protect Greek Cypriot firemen. But Canadian Capt. A. Matthieu, the U.N. officer at the scene, had to negotiate with armed Turks in sandbag positions across the street for the firemen to approach the blaze.

A large wine store, a lace and textile shop, a rubber goods store and an empty house burned to the ground.

"The Turks would not allow us to approach for nearly an hour. By then, two shops were completely gutted," said Capt. John Anastasiades, chief of the Nicosia fire brigade.

At one stage, Greek firemen dragged to safety a Canadian soldier who was about to be overcome by smoke as he sat in a jeep manning a walkie-talkie.

The Nicosia fire was one of several recent blazes to destroy Greek property which the Cyprus government blamed on Turks.

The fire brought the second cease-fire violation charge by the government against the Turks in 24 hours.

A U.N. spokesman said Turkish tanks and troops on Wednesday invaded Athna, took 10 villagers hostage and then withdrew. The Cyprus government said they looted the village of furniture and other goods.

District Judge Calls Trouble Light 'Death Trap'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling a particular household trouble light a "death trap," the chief judge of the U.S. District Court here appealed to news media Thursday to help warn the public of the danger.

Judge George L. Hart Jr., said he personally would call the vice presidents of the three major television networks and urge them to film a demonstration of the light's hazard Friday morning.

Richard O. Simpson, chairman of the U.S. Consumer Product

Safety Commission which brought the case to Hart's court, said he would contact the Washington bureaus of the networks.

The product consists of a long cord attached to a light bulb protected by a metal cage. The hazard results from the soft plastic handle which may enable a user's hand or fingers to come in contact with the metal electrical receptacles, causing fatal shock, the commission has said.

Hart expressed concern that there may not have been enough news coverage of the trouble light which first came to public attention a month ago. But the judge also indicated reluctance to grant the government's request for an order requiring the light's manufacturer and 36 major distributors and retailers to buy national TV and newspaper space to warn the public.

He ordered further reports on the matter by Tuesday.

"The news media would be rendering a great public service in attending the demonstration and in disseminating this information as widely as possible," the judge said.

The safety commission has noted that the lights, retailing for about $1.50 each, bear no brand name, label or other identifying marks distinguishing them from other mechanics' lights.

Named as parties to the action brought by the commission were the lights' manufacturers, A.K.

Electric Corp. of Brooklyn, N.Y., and a number of large discount chain stores including Food Fair, Korvette's, Rose's Stores, Treasury Stores Division of J. C. Penney, Cook United, F.W. Woolworth and Sears.

The commission said about 186,000 of the lights had been sold across the country but only a small number have been returned. A Florida man's death last year was attributed to one of the lights.

Washington (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire said Thursday that vice presidential nominee Nelson Rockefeller's potential shortcomings in dealing with inflation "stand out like a skunk at a family picnic."

"Rockefeller has followed one consistent theme in his political career: to solve any problem, throw money at it," said Proxmire, who will become chairman of the Senate Banking Committee next year.

Proxmire also said Rockefeller's problem was compounded by the fact that he inherited a fortune. "He will face the immense psychological challenge that only a man who has inherited hundreds of millions and has never really had to conserve or save would face in cutting spending."

The former New York governor, Proxmire said, "will have to reverse his field with a vengeance" and demand spending cuts if he is to be effective in fighting inflation as vice president.

Overall, the Wisconsin Democrat said, President Ford "made an excellent choice" in nominating Rockefeller to be vice president — a nomination that must be confirmed by the Senate after it returns from its Labor Day recess.

"But the former New York governor does not come without potential shortcomings," Proxmire said.

"Those shortcomings stand out like a skunk at a family picnic when it comes to the first big job the President is reported ready to give Rockefeller — fighting inflation."

Nader Has His Doubts

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Thursday Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller "won't offer much of a contribution to the redistribution of power and wealth in this country."

"For an economy driven to the brink of disaster by actions of big business and its indentured servants in Washington, it is ironic indeed that the man nominated vice president is one, Nelson Rockefeller," Nader said.

At a news conference, Nader also said President Ford has a "close affinity to big business and is against significant tax reform."

Official Says U.S. May Drive Oil Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Treasury Department official said Thursday the government might have to act to drive oil prices higher if foreign producers maintain world prices at their current levels.

In a news briefing, Jack F. Bennett, undersecretary for monetary funds, said the move would be aimed at cutting demand as well as encouraging development of alternative energy sources.

Bennett said he has been disappointed by the fact that world oil prices have not dropped further in the face of the current oil surplus.

The major foreign producers have responded to the surplus by cutting production to keep prices at their current levels.

Bennett said that continued high prices might require government action domestically to impose a paradox of even higher prices.

He mentioned two possibilities. One was an increase on the present duty of 15.5 cents levied on each barrel of oil imported into the United States. The other was removing controls from so-called "old oil" from U.S. wells.

If oil prices "generally stay at this level, I think we seriously have to consider, in combination with other countries, what responses we take to encourage further conservation," Bennett said.

The reference to other countries was directed at a meeting next month among the world's 13 major oil importers. The United States failed at the last meeting in an attempt to get concerted action on prices.

Bennett stressed that his proposals for raising prices to domestic users are long-term considerations, closely tied to efforts to make the United States less dependent on imported oil.

His boss, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, only last week ruled out any quick lifting of controls on the old oil.

The controlled price for the old oil, or oil from wells that were producing prior to 1972, is $5.25 a barrel. The price for "new oil" is over $10, or roughly equivalent to the world price.

Coal Accord Ends Turbulent Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Mine Workers and Duke Power Co. reached an agreement Thursday settling a turbulent 13-month strike at the utility's Brookside mine in Harlan County, Ky.

UMW President Arnold Miller called the agreement "a major breakthrough" for the 120,000-member union which had rallied behind the Brookside strikers in its battle to establish a base in the eastern Kentucky coal fields.

The settlement, which gives Brookside miners a contract similar to other UMW contracts in the coal industry, was reached early Thursday after an all-night bargaining session before a federal mediator between the UMW and Duke's subsidiary, the Eastover Mining Co.

Miller said Eastover signed the expiring 1971 National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement and also agreed to be bound by the yet-to-be-drafted 1974 agreement once it is ratified by union members.

Miller told a news conference the settlement signals "the beginning of the end for non-union coal in this country." He said that 170 million tons of non-union coal is mined in the United States annually.

Private Gets Hard Labor

FT. MEADE, Md. (AP) — The young Army private who landed a stolen helicopter on the White House lawn was sentenced by a military court Thursday to six months at hard labor and given a $2,400 fine.

The eight-man military jury in fact sentenced 20-year-old Robert K. Preston to one year at hard labor. The judge ruled Preston's pretrial confinement, most of it in maximum security, constitutes a form of punishment and must be subtracted from the court-martial sentence.

The $2,400 fine will be paid by the forfeiture of $200 pay each month for one year. Preston's military attorney said he would appeal the sentence.

Priest's Tasks Varied On Emergency Team

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman stood on a ledge of the high-rise apartment building, nine stories above the street, and the Roman Catholic priest leaned from a nearby window, gauging how to deter her leap. "You'll get arrested for that," he said firmly.

"No!" She stared at him wide-eyed. "What do you mean?"

"It's a misdemeanor in California to commit suicide."

"I don't want to go to jail," she wailed.

"Well, it'll happen to you if you jump."

"How? On what charge?"

"Littering," he said, and smiled.

She burst out laughing. "Okay, Father you win." She crept back to the window. He gave her a hand as she crawled inside and he went with her on the ambulance ride to a hospital.

It was part of the diversified duties for the Rev. George Twigg-Porter, 53, a tall, crew-cut Scottish Jesuit who is chaplain for San Francisco's expert emergency service and a member of the city's suicide-rescue team.

"If you get them talking, you have a chance," he says of potential suicides. "You talk of anything to keep the chatter going: sports, TV shows, the weather. The more you can delay them, the better the chances. It's the sullen, silent ones that are the problem."

Dissuading suicides, however, is only one aspect of Father Twigg-Porter's varied labors to reinforce the frayed sinews of life — both in body and spirit.

"Some people say I'm an accident catalyst, that trouble shows up wherever I happen to be," he says. His brief visit here included offering a helping hand when an epileptic had a seizure on a subway train.

Among other things, Father Twigg-Porter is on the board of Medic Alert Foundation International, a nonprofit group encouraging anyone with a special medical problem to wear an emblem specifying it in case of emergency.

He also heads San Francisco's Committee for the Aging and is director of Apostles of Prayer over a four-state Western region.

Offensive Line Only Question Mark In Missouri Football

By BOB OWENS

Star Sports Editor

Columbia, Mo. — With a veteran and sturdy defense returning, Missouri coach Al Onofrio's biggest concern going to the 1974 football season is development of a competent offensive line to go with a solid backfield.

The Tigers, who won enough games last season to be invited to play in the Sun Bowl, retained guards Don Buck and Steve Sadich, but lost such standouts as All-American center Scott Anderson, tackle Jim Schmitz and tight end John Kelsey to professional football.

They also still have Ray Smith, the quarterback who led the Tigers to a 34-17 crunching of Auburn in the bowl game.

Smith, a 195-pound senior from Santa Maria, Calif., is joined by red-shirt sophomore Steve Pisarkiewicz, a 6-3, rifle-armed 203 pounder from St. Louis.

Many people who have watched Pisarkiewicz say he is the best passer at Missouri since the late Paul Christman set passing records for the Tigers 35 years ago.

"We have two fine quarterbacks," Onofrio told the Big Eight Skywriters Thursday, "but they've been injured since last Saturday and might not be back for a week."

That is delaying the Tigers' preparation for the opener against Mississippi on Sept. 14. Both suffered ankle sprains within the first ten minutes of the first scrimmage last Saturday and Onofrio called both of the injuries "freak accidents."

Smith and Pisarkiewicz were the major object of Skywriter attention after they listened to Onofrio and both are mentally geared for the role planned for them this season.

"I plan to play both of them in a game before the outcome has been determined just to stop speculation on who is No. 1," Onofrio said.

Smith, however, is going to be the starter — at least in the opener, and Pisarkiewicz isn't arguing about the decision.

"I'm accepting the fact Ray will be starting games," he said. "But that doesn't eliminate the idea we're competing. I don't want him to get too far away. It's competition, but I don't know if it's a dual."

Smith admitted "Steve throws a little bit harder than I do, but I'm not saying he's better. I run better than he does, but we both can do whatever the offense calls for."

Onofrio described Smith as an intelligent quarterback who has two tough games under his belt at the end of last season. He runs the option play well, is a driving runner with deceptive speed and elusiveness. He also is an effective passer as his junior college record in California attests. He threw for 2,712 yards and 25 touchdowns at Hancock JC.

Incidentally, the success of Big Eight schools in the national polls a few years back when Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado ranked 1-2-3 influenced his choice of Missouri.

"I also noticed that Notre Dame was on the schedule and I had always wanted to play big time football," Smith said.

Missouri's tough defense will be led by Scott

Pickens, senior co-captain at linebacker, Mark Johnson, who is a very fine tackle, and Dennis Vanarsdall, who Onofrio says approaches the star type as a tackle.

Offensively, a top prospect for star honors is fullback Ray Bybee and tailback Bill Siegler, who was the fullback last season.

Missouri at a Glance

1973 record over-all—7-4.

1973 Big Eight record—3-4, fifth place.

New faces—Defensive end Dale Smith, Tiger back Chuck Banta, offensive tackle D. W. Johnston, quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz.

Strengths—Excellent over-all defense, fine fullback in Ray Bybee and better than average tailback in Bill Siegler.

Weaknesses—Questionable offensive line, placekicking, inexperience at quarterback.

Probable Big Eight finish—Third place.

Osborne Emphasizes Kicking Importance

By RANDY YORK

Kicking, that ultra-important phase which often is the difference between good and great football teams, is being highly scrutinized at Nebraska this fall.

"At this point, I think we've worked more on kicking than we have since I've been here," observed Nebraska head coach Tom Osborne, starting his 13th year with the Cornhusker program.

After a light Thursday workout, Osborne reflected on the importance of kicking, which involves 25 per cent of the plays in a game.

"We told our players this fall that the kicking game is so important that we want our best players on the kicking team," Osborne said.

"That's a time when an all-American candidate should be out on the field," he added. "I know the pros feel differently, but we're not going to pull any punches out there."

So far, Osborne has been pleased with the kicking game. The worry is "not knowing what they're going to do under pressure. So much of being a good kicker is consistency under pressure," notes Osborne.

Sophomore Randy Lessman ranks as the No. 1 Cornhusker punter. Russ Vanous, a transfer from Nebraska Southern Junior College, is No. 2.

The placekicking situation "is still up in the air" between Mike Coyle and Al Eveland, according to Osborne. Gary Hanchera and Tom Kruse are other possibilities, he adds.

Sophomore Bobby Thomas will succeed Randy Borg as the deep back, fielding punts. Junior Jim Burrow is the likely "short man" in punt return situations.

John O'Leary, who returned to the No. 1 offensive unit at I-back Thursday, will join Thomas in the kickoff return category and also is a punt return candidate.

O'Leary, a 6-1, 210-pound Port Washington, N.Y., product, shared the No. 1 I-back duties with senior Don Westbrook Thursday. He had been listed No. 4, sharing second team status, following last Saturday's scrimmage.

"We were pleased with what John did Wednesday," Osborne said. "We think he played better Wednesday than he has since last spring."

Osborne, however, continued to voice concern over the status of his No. 1 backfield with the season opener against Oregon only 16 days away.

Top fullback Tony Davis, sidelined all week with a knee injury, practiced Thursday and is slated for contact in Saturday's scrimmage under game conditions.

No. 1 wingback Ritch Bahe, nursing a hamstring injury, will don pads Monday at the earliest, according to Osborne.

Dodgers Win 5th Straight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andy Messersmith and Mike Marshall combined on a three-hitter Thursday night, pitching Los Angeles to its fifth straight victory, a 3-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs that widened the Dodgers' lead in the National League West to 3½ games over Cincinnati.

Messersmith, earning his 16th victory against only five losses, did not allow the Cubs a hit for six innings but lost the no-hitter and shutout when rookie Pete LaCock led off the seventh with his first major league home run.

Messersmith then surrendered Jerry Morales' single but finished the seventh, then gave way to Marshall when his right elbow tightened slightly. Marshall gave up Jose Cardenal's leadoff single in the ninth.

The Dodgers got all their runs in the first three innings against Bill Bonham, 10-16, who absorbed his fourth straight loss.

Steve Garvey drove in a run in the first inning with an infield out. Von Joshua doubled to open the second and scored on an infield out by Steve Yeager and, in the third, the Dodgers added an unearned run when Bill Buckner came home as second baseman Bob Sperrling let a throw from the outfield get away for an error following Garvey's single.

Snead's 64 Ties Course Record

ATLANTA (UPI) — Twice dodging thunderstorms which threatened to wash out a tremendous round, J. C. Snead tied the course record with an 8-under-par 64 Thursday to take the first round lead in the inaugural $250,000 Tournament Players Championship.

Snead, who followed an opening bogey by sinking birdie putts on seven of his next eight holes, held a one-shot lead over unheralded Tom Evans, an alternate who barely made the field, and two over Jack Nicklaus and Bobby Mitchell.

Plagued throughout the day by severe flashes of bad weather, tournament officials halted play at 7:30 p. m. after a new round of storms moved across the area and planned to resume at 8 a. m. Friday with 44 players yet to complete their first round.

It appeared Charles Coody, who was 5-under through 14 holes, had the best chance to join the leaders.

Snead, whose best finish this year was a tie for second in the Western Open, had put together five straight birdies after his opening bogey when the first rain delay came, halting play for more than an hour.

Although he said, "When you're hot, the rain cools you off," Snead picked up right where he left off when play resumed and tacked on two more birdies to tie the record for the back nine, which he played first, with a six-under par 30.

Snead continued his onslaught, sinking mostly short putts, with his only trouble coming on the 542-yard eighth hole, which was his 17th. He blew an 18-inch putt to take a bogey as the rains again came and lost his chance for a course record.

"It was stupid," he said later. "If I had kept my cool, I would have made that. But people were running all over the place, getting out of the rain."

The Tom Evans story was even more remarkable. Evans, who will be 26 on Labor Day and is only in his second year on the tour, did not know until Wednesday whether he would play in this tournament, which the pros herald as their own and which PGA officials hope will become a fifth major tour event.

When Bobby Cole dropped out, Evans got his chance, as the next-to-last entry in the field and he made the most of it with a round of 33-32, including birdies on his last three holes.

Nicklaus, calling his "fun" round, and Mitchell, who was taking pills to fight off a cold, dominated the early play as each came in with 66s.

"This probably was my best round this year," Nicklaus said. "This round was fun —there haven't been many of those this year."

Nicklaus almost had a 63, barely missing a 23-foot eagle putt on No. 18 and a 10-foot birdie at No. 9.

Mitchell, who almost passed out from the heat during a Wednesday practice round, had no such trouble Thursday as he also enjoyed what he called his best round of the year.

Six golfers were bunched at 69 while Johnny Miller, winner of six tournaments already this year, was in a group at 70. Miller put on an eye-popping putting performance, but he ran into golf trouble because he said, "I got too aggressive."

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were at 73 while U. S. Open champion Hale Irwin and PGA champion Lee Trevino were still on the course when the round was halted.

Court Rejects Order

Wednesday, Lancaster District Court Judge William C. Hastings denied a temporary restraining order sought by Nelson Ostergard and Wayne V. Womochil.

The two men had sought to restrain the Nebraska Racing Commission from enforcing an order issued earlier this summer banning both men from Nebraska race tracks.

Judge Hastings set Sept. 9 as the date for a District Court hearing on Ostergard's and Womochil's bid for a temporary injunction against the racing commission order.

Nebraska Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer, making a rare courtroom appearance presented the state's case in Wednesday proceedings.

In a suit originally filed Aug. 8, Ostergard and Womochil allege that the racing commission action banning them from Nebraska race tracks was "arbitrary, discriminatory and capricious" and will result in irreparable damage.

The State Racing Commission decided to bar the two men from all licensed racing facilities in the state after commission security officer Jack Ketterer observed Ostergard and Womochil engaged in questionable activities.

In an affidavit filed with District Court, Ketterer said the two men were barred from race tracks on July 25 after being observed in the conduct of "suspected illegal activities in connection with bookmakers."

Pius X Expecting Nothing Easy

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

If Lincoln Pius X football coach Vince Aldrich is a little gruffer these days, there's a reason.

Aldrich, starting his 25th year of coaching high school football in Lincoln, is using a more tough-minded approach "out of necessity," he says.

"Yes, we're coaching 'em a lot tougher and pushing 'em a lot harder this year," confides Aldrich. "We feel we need this insistence on all-out effort."

"The attitude of our players has been very good," he adds, "but we want to make sure there's no complacency after the state (Class B) championship."

"Last year, the enthusiasm was natural. But after you experience an exceptional season, some start thinking it should come easy or something," observes Aldrich.

The veteran Thunderbolt coach isn't expecting anything easy, especially with a tough schedule and having to rebuild almost completely from scratch.

Pius X lost all 22 starters on offense and defense from last season. Only eight lettermen are on hand.

Yet Aldrich refuses to talk negatively. "We have some ability. We'll put a pretty good size team on the field and they won't be too slow," he analyzes.

The 1974 Sunday Journal and Star prep Coach of the Year points with pride to the size of his five-man defensive front.

Right now, it consists of ends Pat Lemпка (6-2, 180) and Scott Krause (6-3, 180), tackles John

LeDuc (5-11, 198) and Matt Fouts (6-0, 195) and either Mike Warner (6-2, 208) or Jim Mulligan (6-0, 170) at middle guard.

The defensive backfield has been the surprise of fall camp. John Keady, Rick Sullivan, Larry Gross and Kent Krause "may be inexperienced, but they've looked real tough back there," according to Aldrich.

Linebacker Dan Bennett, the most experienced player returning from last year's championship outfit, "has made some of our fullbacks fight like heck just to gain six inches."

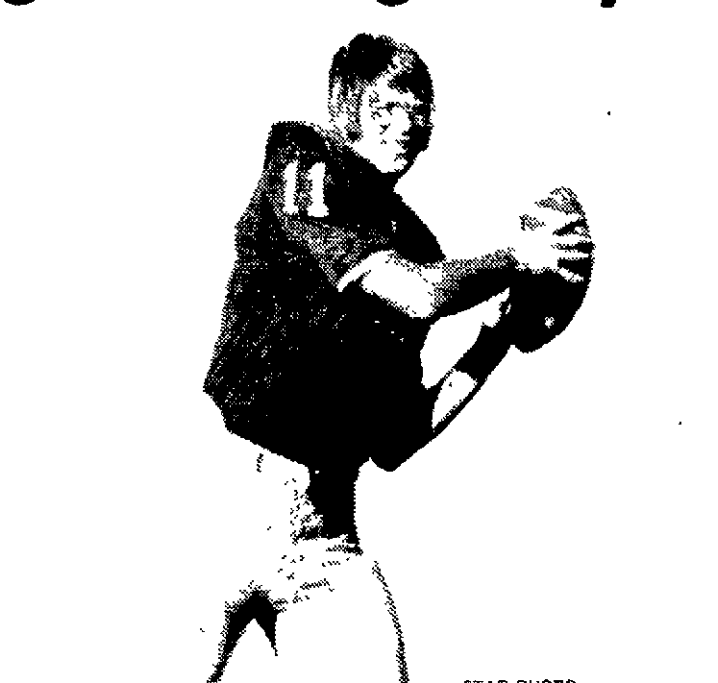

It's that type of mental toughness Aldrich wants to see spread throughout the team by the time the Bolts collide with Lincoln High Sept. 6 in their season opener.

Pius X's starting lineup outlook:

Offense: quarterback — Mitch Ohnoutka or Pat Fuller; fullback — Bill Franklin or Jerry Kobza; wingback — Steve Rohren; I-back — Sullivan or Tom Doggett; split end — Jim Smiley; tight end — Mike Peters; tackles — Lemпка and Mark Nagengast or Fouts; guards — Lonnie Petrzilka and Jim Stefcovich; center — Gary Vacha or Warner.

Defense: ends — Lemпка and Scott Krause; tackles — LeDuc and Fouts; middle guard — Warner or Mulligan; linebackers — Franklin, Bennett and George Riggs or Kobza; monster — Keady; cornerbacks — Sullivan and Gross; safety — Kent Krause.

MEET THE HUSKERS

Wonder Monds, Age 22, 6-2, 200, Junior, Ft. Pierce, Fla., No. 26, defensive back, alternated with Mark Heydorff as 1973 starter at monster position. Earned No. 1 monster position after a good spring.

Jeff Moran, Age 22, 6-1, 203, Senior, Huron, S.D., No. 30, I-Back, a letterman in 1972 and 1973, Jeff is now battling for the No. 1 I-Back position following a good spring.

Foreman Baptized 'The Mummy' By Ali

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali held a revival meeting Thursday at Madison Square Garden, and in the process baptized George Foreman, in Absentia, as "the mummy."

Giving a performance which ranked about 9½ on a scale of 1 to 10, Ali was in splendid voice, the mellifluous tones rumbling from a body which he has now brought down to 215 pounds as he prepares to take back "my title" from Foreman at 3 a. m. Zaire time in Kinshasa on Sept. 25.

"You know, you experts, I've named fighters in the past. Sonny Liston was 'The Bear,' you remember. Well today I name George Foreman 'The Mummy,'" he said, and proceeded to give a graphic impersonation of a mummy, wrapped in yards of cloth, stomping and thumping through a jungle in pursuit of frightened natives.

His captive audience of media men and adoring followers roared and applauded, but Ali stopped dead. "How come only the blacks are clapping?" he asked.

He had come here from his mountain camp in Deer Lake, Pa. to help the Garden launch its ticket selling campaign, and now he was urging everyone to "be ther early" or else they might miss the knockout—the knockout of "The Mummy" that is.

With his sidekick Drew Bundini feeding him the appropriate revival meeting shouts, Ali orated and gesticulated and danced. "It's 10 years since I beat the Big Bear," he brayed. Bundini shouted "Yeah, man, yeah man, that's right, that's right."

"I am the greatest, the prettiest, the best of all time, right?" Ali shouted, the eyes rolling, the body writhing.

"Yeah, yeah, yeah!" Bundini replied.

"You so-called experts here," Ali thundered, "you'll see, you'll see. You experts say Foreman gonna whup me, just like you made me the poor under dog against Liston, against Fraz-zuh, against even Norton the second time. 'When those 32-year-old laigs gonna go, Ali, you asked. Well, you'll see. You'll see again.

"I'm gonna retire after I take back my title. There's nuttin' else for me to do. I cleaned the slate when I beat Norton and Fraz-zuh. And when I take my ti-tle back, you'll have to write that I am the greatest of all time."

As he spoke, Garden brass smiled. If anyone can sell Ali, Ali sells Ali best of all, even at the $50, $25 and $50 the Garden will charge to see Muhammad answer the bell against Foreman.

There will be added attractions at the Garden on the night of Sept. 24, when the fight will be carried in color on four 15x20 screens. A premier showing of a film covering all the heavyweight champions from John L. Sullivan to Foreman will be shown.

And the Garden also announced that their hosts for the big night would be former wearers of the crown Ali wants to reclaim.

John F.X. Condon announced that he had personally invited

"all the living ex-champions to be on hand." Maybe John might have asked the man who names people "The Mummy" to get the other ex-champions too.

Offensive Line Only Question Mark In Missouri Football

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor
Columbia, Mo. — With a veteran and sturdy defense returning, Missouri coach Al Onofrio's biggest concern going to the 1974 football season is development of a competent offensive line to go with a solid backfield.
The Tigers, who won enough games last season to be invited to play in the Sun Bowl, retained guards Don Buck and Steve Sadich, but lost such standouts as All-American center Scott Anderson, tackle Jim Schnietz and tight end John Kelsey to professional football.
They also still have Ray Smith, the quarterback who led the Tigers to a 34-17 crunching of Auburn in the bowl game.
Smith, a 195-pound senior from Santa Maria, Calif., is joined by red-shirt sophomore Steve Pisarkiewicz, a 6-3, rifle-armed 203 pounder from St. Louis.

Many people who have watched Pisarkiewicz say he is the best passer at Mizzou since the late Paul Christman set passing records for the Tigers 35 years ago.
"We have two fine quarterbacks," Onofrio told the Big Eight Skywriters Thursday, "but they've been injured since last Saturday and might not be back for a week."
That is delaying the Tigers' preparation for the opener against Mississippi on Sept. 14. Both suffered ankle sprains within the first ten minutes of the first scrimmage last Saturday and Onofrio called both of the injuries "freak accidents."
Smith and Pisarkiewicz were the major object of Skywriter attention after they listened to Onofrio and both are mentally geared for the role planned for them this season.
"I plan to play both of them in a game before the outcome has been determined just to stop speculation on who is No. 1," Onofrio said.

BIG 8

Skywriters

Smith, however, is going to be the starter — at least in the opener, and Pisarkiewicz isn't arguing about the decision.
"I'm accepting the fact Ray will be starting games," he said. "But that doesn't eliminate the idea we're competing. I don't want him to get too far away. It's competition, but I don't know if it's a dual."

Smith admitted "Steve throws a little bit harder than I do, but I'm not saying he's better. I run better than he does, but we both can do whatever the offense calls for."
Onofrio described Smith as an intelligent quarterback who has two tough games under his belt at the end of last season. He runs the option play well, is a driving runner with deceptive speed and elusiveness. He also is an effective passer as his junior college record in California attests. He threw for 2,712 yards and 25 touchdowns at Hancock JC.
Incidentally, the success of Big Eight schools in the national polls a few years back when Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado ranked 1-2-3 influenced his choice of Missouri.
"I also noticed that Notre Dame was on the schedule and I had always wanted to play big time football," Smith said.
Missouri's tough defense will be led by Scott

Pickens, senior co-captain at linebacker, Mark Johnson, who is a very fine tackle, and Dennis Vandersall, who Onofrio says approaches the star type as a tackle.
Offensively, a top prospect for star honors is fullback Ray Bybee and tailback Bill Siegler, who was the fullback last season.
Missouri at a Glance
1973 record over-all—7-4.
1973 Big Eight record—3-4, fifth place.
New faces—Defensive end Dale Smith, Tiger back Chuck Banta, offensive tackle D. W. Johnston, quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz.
Strengths—Excellent over-all defense, fine fullback in Ray Bybee and better than average tailback in Bill Ziegler.
Weaknesses—Questionable offensive line, placekicking, inexperience at quarterback.
Probable Big Eight finish—Third place.

Osborne Emphasizes Kicking Importance

By RANDY YORK
Kicking, that ultra-important phase which often is the difference between good and great football teams, is being highly scrutinized at Nebraska this fall.
"At this point, I think we've worked more on kicking than we have since I've been here," observed Nebraska head coach Tom Osborne, starting his 13th year with the Cornhusker program.
After a light Thursday workout, Osborne reflected on the importance of kicking, which involves 25 per cent of the plays in a game.
"We told our players this fall that the kicking game is so important that we want our best players on the kicking team," Osborne said.
"That's a time when an all-American candidate should be out on the field," he added. "I know the pros feel differently, but we're not going to pull any punches out there."

concern over the status of his No. 1 backfield with the season opener against Oregon only 16 days away.
Top fullback Tony Davis, sidelined all week with a knee injury, practiced Thursday and is slated for contact in Saturday's scrimmage under game conditions.
No. 1 wingback Ritch Bahe, nursing a hamstring injury, will don pads Monday at the earliest, according to Osborne.

Dodgers Win 5th Straight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andy Messersmith and Mike Marshall combined on a three-hitter Thursday night, pitching Los Angeles to its fifth straight victory, a 3-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs that widened the Dodgers' lead in the National League West to 3½ games over Cincinnati.
Messersmith, earning his 16th victory against only five losses, did not allow the Cubs a hit for six innings but lost the no-hitter and shutout when rookie Pete LaCock led off the seventh with his first major league home run.
Messersmith then surrendered Jerry Morales' single but finished the seventh, then gave way to Marshall when his right elbow tightened slightly. Marshall gave up Jose Cardenal's leadoff single in the ninth.
The Dodgers got all their runs in the first three innings against Bill Bonham, 10-16, who absorbed his fourth straight loss.
Steve Garvey drove in a run in the first inning with an infield out, Von Joshua doubled to open the second and scored on an infield out by Steve Yeager and, in the third, the Dodgers added an unearned run when Bill Buckner came home as second baseman Bob Sperrling let a throw from the outfield get away for an error following Garvey's single.

Snead's 64 Ties Course Record

ATLANTA (UPI) — Twice dodging thunderstorms which threatened to wash out a tremendous round, J. C. Snead tied the course record with an 8-under-par 64 Thursday to take the first round lead in the inaugural $250,000 Tournament Players Championship.
Snead, who followed an opening bogey by sinking birdie putt on seven of his next eight holes, held a one-shot lead over unheralded Tom Evans, an alternate who barely made the field, and two over Jack Nicklaus and Bobby Mitchell.
Plagued throughout the day by severe flashes of bad weather, tournament officials halted play at 7:30 p. m. after a new round of storms moved across the area and planned to resume at 8 a.m. Friday with 44 players yet to complete their first round.

join the leaders.
Snead, whose best finish this year was a tie for second in the Western Open, had put together five straight birdies after his opening bogey when the first rain delay came, halting play for more than an hour.
Although he said, "When you're hot, the rain cools you off," Snead picked up right where he left off when play resumed and tacked on two more birdies to tie the record for the back nine, which he played first, with a six-under par 30.

Snead continued his onslaught, sinking mostly short putts, with his only trouble coming on the 542-yard eighth hole, which was his 17th. He blew an 18-inch putt to take a bogey as the rains again came and lost his chance for a course record.

It appeared Charles Coody, who was 5-under through 14 holes, had the best chance to

"It was stupid," he said later. "If I had kept my cool, I would have made that. But people were running all over the place, getting out of the rain."

The Tom Evans story was even more remarkable. Evans, who will be 26 on Labor Day and is only in his second year on the tour, did not know until Wednesday whether he would play in this tournament, which the pros herald as their own and which PGA officials hope will become a fifth major tour event.

When Bobby Cole dropped out, Evans got his chance, as the next-to-last entry in the field and he made the most of it with a round of 33-32, including birdies on his last three holes.

Nicklaus, calling his a "fun" round, and Mitchell, who was taking pills to fight off a cold, dominated the early play as each came in with 66s.

"This probably was my best round this year," Nicklaus said. "This round was fun —there haven't been many of those this year."

Nicklaus almost had a 63, barely missing a 23-foot eagle putt on No. 18 and a 10-foot birdie at No. 9.

Mitchell, who almost passed out from the heat during a Wednesday practice round, had no such trouble Thursday as he also enjoyed what he called his best round of the year.

Six golfers were bunched at 69 while Johnny Miller, winner of six tournaments already this year, was in a group at 70. Miller put on an eye-popping putting performance, but he ran into bogey trouble because he said, "I got too aggressive."

Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were at 73 while U. S. Open champion Hale Irwin and PGA champion Lee Trevino were still on the course when the round was halted.

Court Rejects Order

Wednesday, Lancaster District Court Judge William C. Hastings denied a temporary restraining order sought by Nelson Ostergard an Wayne V. Womochil.

The two men had sought to restrain the Nebraska Racing Commission from enforcing an order issued earlier this summer banning both men from Nebraska race tracks.

Judge Hastings set Sept. 9 as the date for a District Court hearing on Ostergard's and Womochil's bid for a temporary injunction against the racing commission order.

Nebraska Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer, making a rare courtroom appearance presented the state's case in Wednesday proceedings.

In a suit originally filed Aug. 8, Ostergard and Womochil allege that the racing commission action banning them from Nebraska race tracks was "arbitrary, discriminatory and capricious" and will result in irreparable damage.

The State Racing Commission decided to bar the two men from all licensed racing facilities in the state after commission security officer Jack Ketterer observed Ostergard and Womochil engaged in questionable activities.

In an affidavit filed with District Court, Ketterer said the two men were barred from race tracks on July 25 after being observed in the conduct of "suspected illegal activities in connection with bookmakers."

Pius X Expecting Nothing Easy

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

If Lincoln Pius X football coach Vince Aldrich is a little gruffer these days, there's a reason.

Aldrich, starting his 25th year of coaching high school football in Lincoln, is using a more tough-minded approach "out of necessity," he says.

"Yes, we're coaching 'em a lot tougher and pushing 'em a lot harder this year," confides Aldrich. "We feel we need this insistence on all-out effort."

"The attitude of our players has been very good," he adds, "but we want to make sure there's no complacency after the state (Class B) championship."

"Last year, the enthusiasm was natural. But after you experience an exceptional season, some start thinking it should come easy or something," observes Aldrich.

The veteran Thunderbolt coach isn't expecting anything easy, especially with a tough schedule and having to rebuild almost completely from scratch.

Pius X lost all 22 starters on offense and defense from last season. Only eight lettermen are on hand.

Yet Aldrich refuses to talk negatively. "We have some ability. We'll put a pretty good size team on the field and they won't be too slow," he analyzes.

The 1974 Sunday Journal and Star prep Coach of the Year points with pride to the size of his five-man defensive front.

Right now, it consists of ends Pat Lempka (6-2, 180) and Scott Krause (6-3, 180), tackles John

LeDuc (5-11, 198) and Matt Fouts (6-0, 195) and either Mike Warner (6-2, 208) or Jim Mulligan (6-0, 170) at middle guard.

The defensive backfield has been the surprise of fall camp. John Keady, Rick Sullivan, Larry Gross and Kent Krause "may be inexperienced, but they've looked real tough back there," according to Aldrich.
Linebacker Dan Bennett, the most experienced player returning from last year's championship outfit, "has made some of our fullbacks fight like heck just to gain six inches."

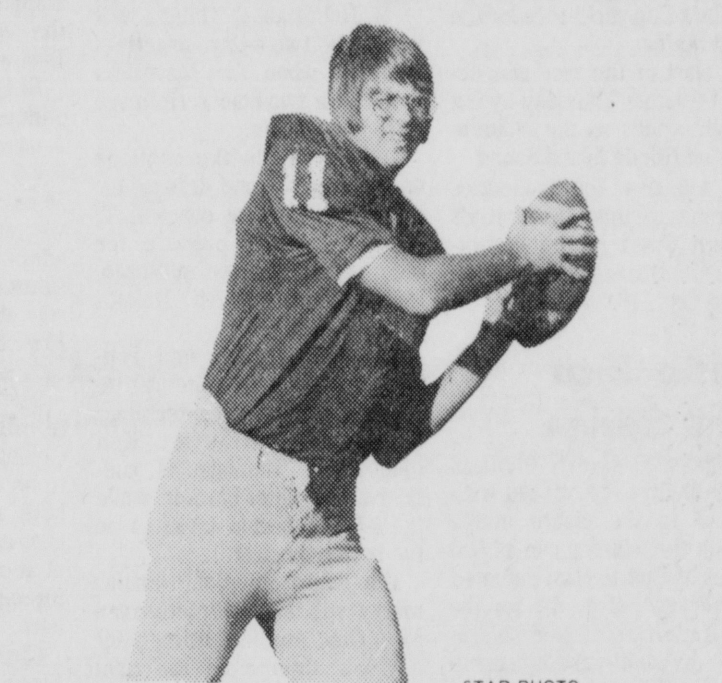

It's that type of mental toughness Aldrich wants to see spread throughout the team by the time the Bolts collide with Lincoln High Sept. 6 in their season opener.

Pius X's starting lineup outlook:

Offense: quarterback — Mitch Ohnoutka or Pat Fuller; fullback — Bill Franklin or Jerry Kobza; wingback — Steve Rohren; I-back — Sullivan or Tom Doggett; split end — Jim Smiley; tight end — Mike Peters; tackles — Lempka and Mark Nagengast or Fouts; guards — Lonnie Petrzilka and Jim Stefcovich; center — Gary Vacha or Warner.

Defense: ends — Lempka and Scott Krause; tackles — LeDuc and Fouts; middle guard — Warner or Mulligan; linebackers — Franklin, Bennett and George Riggs or Kobza; monster — Keady; cornerbacks — Sullivan and Gross; safety — Kent Krause.

Morning Briefing

A Roundup of Sports News

Football

Clyde "Bulldog" Turner, the onetime Chicago Bear center who made it to the football Hall of Fame, was in serious condition following what doctors said was a possible stroke.

Allan Page has resigned as player representative of the Minnesota Vikings and Bobby Bryant also quit as the team's alternate player representative.

Charges against 14 Green Bay Packers and six other professional football players for illegal picketing have been dropped by Brown County Judge John Jaekels in Green Bay, Wis.

Horse Racing

Overnight rains which gave a further soaking to the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds Track forced the second consecutive 24-hour postponement of the Hambletonian, classic Big-Money Race for 3-year-old trotters Thursday.

No one is speculating when Thistledown will resume its racing programs, not even the owner of the race track, in the face of war between two unions at the plant.

"Because of a work shortage stoppage by the Racing Guild of Ohio Local 304, management cannot predict when racing will resume," said Edward J. Debartolo, owner.

Other Sports

The Buffalo Braves of the NBA have acquired center Dale Schlueter from the Atlanta Hawks in a straight cash deal.

Richard Petty drove his Dodge to a speed of 150.132 miles per hour to nip Buddy Baker for the pole position for the 25th running of the Southern 500 Stock Car Race Labor Day.

Brazilian star Pele arrived in Madrid Thursday to play his last soccer games in Europe before retiring from the sport that brought him worldwide fame and a fortune estimated at several million dollars.

The Kansas City Royals have announced that they are buying pitcher Dennis Leonard and catcher Dennis Paepke from their Omaha farm club in the American Association.

Jim Dent won an easy $5,000 Wednesday by slamming a golf ball 324 1/2 yards to take top honors in a driving contest the day before the first round of the tournament players championship.

Living legend Jesse Owens and 25 other Americans who ran, jumped, and pole vaulted into track history will be officially enshrined as the initial inductees into the National Track and Field Hall of Fame in Charleston, W. Va.

Intrepid Sails By Courageous

NEWPORT, R. I. (AP) — Intrepid defeated Courageous by 54 seconds Thursday, evening their final trial series at four victories apiece in competition to determine who will defend the America's Cup yacht race for the United States.

The start of the race was delayed 1 1/2 hours Thursday by fog and light winds on the 24.3-mile course on Rhode Island Sound.

The winner of the final series will race against Australia's Southern Cross in the best-of-seven America's Cup final beginning Sept. 10.

Puerto Rico Wins Series

Roseburg, Ore. (AP) — Alexis Firpi's single to right field with two out in the eighth inning drove in the winning run as Rio Piedras of Puerto Rico defeated Lake Oswego, Ore., 4-3 for the 1974 American Legion World Series baseball championship Tuesday night.

Puerto Rico became only the fourth team in the 49-year history of Legion baseball to win consecutive national titles.

Lincoln 8-Year-Old Scores Hole-In-One

When was the last time you heard of an eight-year-old scoring a hole-in-one?

Well, Lincoln's eight-year-old Jimmy Stefkovich accomplished the incredible feat Thursday, by using a driver on the 87-yard par-3 seventh hole at Jim Ager Memorial Junior Golf Course.

Chris Evert readies her racket for a smashing return during opening round action of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Borg, Evert Advance In U.S. Open Tennis

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, the nervous Swedish child prodigy of world tennis whose good looks and shot-making have melted many a female heart, defeated Victor Amaya in four erratic sets in the first round of the U.S. Open championships.

A record second day crowd of 13,128 fans came out, hoping to see the first act of the "Chris and Jimmy show," but rain upset the script and kept Jimmy Connors in the locker room, so he should be well recovered from his stomach trouble when he takes the court Friday against Jeff Borowiak.

Borg, at 18, the youngest winner of the U.S. pro title, beat Amaya of Holland, Mich., 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 in a match interrupted 50 minutes by rain. Bjorn's form was erratic as he attempted to adjust to the fast grass after a summer spent on slow European clay during which he won the French and Italian titles.

Chris Evert, who forgot her tennis dress, and Evonne Goolagong, who was just happy to be out in the open air again, both scored comfortable matches as did "the women's libber of them all," Billie Jean King, three-time winner of the title here.

Chris, winner at Wimbledon, France and Italy this year, had little trouble in defeating Gail Chaffreux of France 6-1, 6-1, for her 52nd straight victory, while Evonne, her main rival among the new generation of players, beat Jeannie Evert 6-3, 6-0.

Ms. King, the driving force behind World Team Tennis in its first year and a rare visitor to the tournament circuit this year, beat Isabel Fernandez of Colombia 6-2, 6-2.

Borg said he was not ready to play on grass before he took the center court and his early play showed just how much he needed to adjust. He continually over-hit, especially his volleys, and had difficulty handling Amaya's booming first serve.

But Borg survived simply because he plays without nerves and goes for his shots whatever the circumstances.

Petty Gets Pole For 500 Race

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Richard Petty, showing unexpected muscle on a track that almost killed him a few years ago, captured the front row pole position Thursday for the 25th running of the Southern 500 stock car race.

Petty, 35, drove his familiar red and blue Dodge around the tricky, mile and three-eighths Darlington Raceway at 150.132 miles per hour to top a dozen drivers who made the 40-car lineup on the first day of trials.

He made his run around the narrow ribbon of asphalt in 93-degree temperatures, with something like 110 degrees prevailing in his cockpit.

"Don't ask me what it was like out there," he said with a grin. "No way you can air condition these cars, but that's the only comfortable way to drive at Darlington in September."

The other front row berth for Monday's 12 noon start went to Buddy Baker in a Ford with a speed of 150.096 miles per hour. Baker, a strapping 6-foot-4 and 225 pounds, also complained of the heat.

"It's like a furnace," he said. "But I respect the place so much that I really didn't feel the heat. It's a pleasure to do all this moping."

David Pearson, ace of the Wood brothers' Mercury team and the pre-qualifying favorite for the pole position, could do no better than third best with a speed of 149.552 m.p.h. His second row mate will be Cale Yarborough, who tripped the clocks at 148.991 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet.

Fifth fastest was Bobby Allison in a Matador at 148.842 m.p.h.

Yarborough and Allison are two-time winners of the Southern 500, the Labor Day classic that carries more prestige than any other stock car race. Baker and Petty also have won it, while Pearson, though never a winner, has been a bridesmaid five times in 13 years.

Pearson might have done better. But his car got sideways briefly in the elevated first turn of the track and he almost met the guard rail. He lost valuable clock time getting straightened out.

Creighton Reorganizes Sports Staff

Omaha (AP) — Creighton University has reorganized its athletic staff and physical education program in an effort to improve the university's intercollegiate sports, physical education instruction, intramurals and recreation.

The Rev. Michael P. Sheridan, S.J., vice president for student personnel, said physical education will no longer be a department of the College of Arts and Sciences. He said physical education majors still will be offered and all academic matters concerning courses and requirements in physical education will be handled by the college.

The entire athletic staff reports to Athletic Director Tom Apke, who is responsible to Father Sheridan. The athletic staff will remain on the arts college faculty as adjunct members. Women's coach Ed-dye McClure will coordinate the academic program and report to Dr. Richard H. Passon, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dan Offenburger, who was chairman of the physical education department for six years along with several athletic positions, now becomes assistant director of athletics.

Luth. Mutual Tops All-Stars

Lutheran Mutual, winners of the 1974 Lincoln Invitational AAA Slow Pitch softball tournament, defeated the AAA Slow Pitch League All-Stars twice, 3-2 and 8-7, in games at Elks Field Tuesday night.

It was the first time in three years the All-Stars have been beaten in the series.

L. Mutual 102 000 0-3 6 3
All-Stars 100 000 1-2 9 1

All-Stars 301 001 2-7 9 2
L. Mutual 300 022 1-8 12 4

Chris Evert, a gal who already has banked more than $150,000 in winnings this year and probably as much from endorsements, including those from tennis dress designs, made the error of trusting young sister Jeannie to carry her bag of goodies.

"I carried one bag and thought Jeannie would bring the other," said Chris. "It was only 20 minutes before I was due on court that I realized I did not have a dress."

Kris Kemmer came to the rescue, but instead of a pastel-shade of her own design, Chris was forced to wear an all-white outfit.

Her play, however, was as crisp as ever. Mrs. Chantreaux summed it up by saying, "It's like being put through a meat-grinder" when playing her.

Evonne, who is 3-0 against Chris on grass and 5-7 lifetime, said, "It was nice to be playing outdoors again." She has spent the post-Wimbledon period playing indoors in World Team Tennis.

Other male seeds to advance were Tom Okker of the Netherlands, the sixth pick, who defeated Erik van Dillen of Aptos, Calif., 5-7, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2; Guillermo Vilas, the ninth seed from Argentina, 6-3, 6-2, 6-7, 26, 6-3 victor over Ferdi Taygan of Framingham, Mass.; 10th-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, who defeated Frantisek Pala of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 7-5, 6-4; and 11th-seeded Marty Riessen of Amelia Island, Fla., who defeated Steve Krulevitz of Baltimore 6-0, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-0.

On the distaff side, the other seed to progress was sixth-seeded Rosie Casals of San Francisco, a 6-2, 6-2 winner over Barbara Downs of Alamo, Calif.

An All-Star Funeral

Columbia, Mo. — There's one consolation about the Big Eight Conference football race for 1974. The games WILL be played and Oklahoma will have to prove it has the best team in the league.

Just about everyone questioned by Big Eight Skywriters so far concedes the title to the Sooners, even their coach Barry Switzer, whose only hedge was "we should win, but we'll have to prove it every Saturday."

Oklahoma State's Jim Stanley, Kansas' Don Fambrough and Missouri's Al Onofrio aren't exactly throwing in the towel because all of them have been around long enough to know that "upset" is something that can and does sometimes happen.

Switzer used the word "supers" to describe his top football players. In some college football circles the word used is "blue-chippers," which means a quality athlete.

Asked about the "supers" on the Sooner squad, Stanley replied: "Them guys can have five 'supers' die and have ten better ones come to the funeral."

Red-Shirt Called Off

Jim Littrell, from the town made famous by the country song (Muskogee), had been thinking about the possibility of taking off 1974 as a red-shirt until he suddenly became the Oklahoma starting fullback last week.

"I guess you might say I got the position by default," Littrell said earlier this week. He got it when Switzer threw starter Waymon Clark off the team, but it really wasn't by default.

Littrell enjoyed a good spring practice and coaches said this summer there's not very much difference in his ability and that of Clark, who last year rushed for over 1,000 yards.

Littrell is big (202 pounds), quick and is an excellent blocker. On top of that, he's also a fine punter, having booted one 72 yards against Texas last year and a pair of 45-plus yarders against Missouri.

Littrell played very little last year and gained just 179 yards in 39 rushes. He's not a blazer, just 4.7 speed in the 40, but with all his other attributes the Sooners won't drop off much because of Clark's loss.

Heard Around The Tour

Carl Devorce, 6-1, 253 pound senior, will be Oklahoma's starting middle guard. He was a backup to Barry Price as a sophomore and played both nose guard and tackle last season.

Asked who the toughest runner he has faced at OSU, Devorce replied without batting an eye: "Tony Davis of Nebraska. He never quits. He's a small Steve Owens." Owens, of course, is the Oklahoma fullback of a few years ago who won the Heisman Trophy.

Basketball coach Guy Strong, going into his second season as head man at OSU, has signed five recruits. One is transfer John Zakariassen from Weber State, a 6-1 guard.

BIG 8 REPORT

Iowa State

AMES, Iowa (AP)—Iowa State has lost the services of senior tight end Don Greenwood for the 1974 season, head coach Earle Bruce said Thursday.

Greenwood, a two-year letterman and considered the leader at tight end this fall, underwent surgery Thursday morning for removal of a ruptured disk.

Bruce said sophomores Al Dixon and Glover Rogers will now compete for the starting position.

The Cyclones held a 25-minute controlled scrimmage during the afternoon, emphasizing goal line situations.

After watching the scrimmage, Bruce said the defense "has a long way to go."

Kansas State

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Coach Vince Gibson was so happy with Thursday's Kansas State football practice he treated the squad afterward to cold watermelon.

"We had a good day's practice," the coach beamed. "The kids came back from that scrimmage yesterday and worked hard to get better."

Gibson said he was especially pleased with the first team passing offense led by quarterback Steve Grogan.

Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas football coaching staff radiated optimism Thursday after studying films of Wednesday's scrimmage.

"I think we're ahead of where we expected to be at this time, especially the offense," Coach Don Fambrough said. "I'm more encouraged about the people in the offensive line."

Thursday's workout was relatively light, being devoted to correcting mistakes discovered in the films.

Fambrough said the Jayhawks will work on passes Friday and their next hard hitting will be in a scrimmage at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Oklahoma State

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma State's first team offense and defense took an early trip to the dressing room Thursday after a regular practice session in Lewis Field.

"We let the first team out about 30 minutes early so we could get some film on the reserves," said coach Jim Stanley.

"We wanted to find out who wanted to move up," he said.

Stanley lauded the performances of offensive tackle Mark Perrelli, linebacker Donnie Reddick and offensive guard Dan Burns.

"Burns has a good chance to play," Stanley said. "He improves every day."

"It was a real good practice," he said. "The defense looked good and the offense picked it up as it went along. That's a good sign."

Red Cross Sets Swim Lessons

Football

Clyde "Bulldog" Turner, the onetime Chicago Bear center who made it to the football Hall of Fame, was in serious condition following what doctors said was a possible stroke.

Allan Page has resigned as player representative of the Minnesota Vikings and Bobby Bryant also quit as the team's alternate player representative.

Charges against 14 Green Bay Packers and six other professional football players for illegal picketing have been dropped by Brown County Judge John Jaekels in Green Bay, Wisc.

Horse Racing

Overnight rains which gave a further soaking to the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds Track forced the second consecutive 24-hour postponement of the Hambletonian, classic Big-Money Race for 3-year-old trotters Thursday.

No one is speculating when Thistledown will resume its racing programs, not even the owner of the race track, in the face of war between two unions at the plant.

"Because of a work shortage stoppage by the Racing Guild of Ohio Local 304, management cannot predict when racing will resume," said Edward J. DeBartolo, owner.

Other Sports

The Buffalo Braves of the NBA have acquired center Dale Schlueter from the Atlanta Hawks in a straight cash deal.

Richard Petty drove his Dodge to a speed of 150.132 miles per hour to nip Buddy Baker for the pole position for the 25th running of the Southern 500 Stock Car Race Labor Day.

Brazilian star Pele arrived in Madrid Thursday to play his last soccer games in Europe before retiring from the sport that brought him worldwide fame and a fortune estimated at several million dollars.

The Kansas City Royals have announced that they are buying pitcher Dennis Leonard and catcher Dennis Paepke from their Omaha farm club in the American Association.

Jim Dent won an easy $5,000 Wednesday by slamming a golf ball 324 1/2 yards to take top honors in a driving contest the day before the first round of the tournament players championship.

Living legend Jesse Owens and 25 other Americans who ran, jumped, and pole vaulted into track history will be officially enshrined as the initial inductees into the National Track and Field Hall of Fame in Charleston, W. Va.

Bjorn broke for 2-1 in the first set, only to be caught at 33. In the second, he trailed 0-2 and that was enough for Amaya. In the third, the Swede broke through in the ninth game and led 5-2 in the fourth, but failed to put the match away. However, in the next game, Amaya served two double-faults and that proved a handicap.

"As a I said earlier, I need time to adjust to grass," said Borg, whose next opponent is Indian Davis Cupper Vijay Amritraj, a grass court specialist.

Chris Evert, a gal who already has banked more than $150,000 in winnings this year and probably as much from endorsements, including those from tennis dress designs, made the error of trusting young sister Jeannie to carry her bag of goodies.

"I think we're ahead of where we expected to be at this time, especially the offense," Coach Don Fambrough said. "I'm more encouraged about the people in the offensive line."

Thursday's workout was relatively light, being devoted to correcting mistakes discovered in the films.

Fambrough said the Jayhawks will work on passes Friday and their next hard hitting will be in a scrimmage at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Oklahoma State

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State's first team offense and defense took an early trip to the dressing room Thursday after a regular practice session in Lewis Field.

"We let the first team out about 30 minutes early so we could get some film on the reserves," said coach Jim Stanley.

"We wanted to find out who wanted to move up," he said. Stanley lauded the performances of offensive tackle Mark Perrelli, linebacker Donnie Reddick and offensive guard Dan Burns.

"Burns has a good chance to play," Stanley said. "He improves every day."

"It was a real good practice," he said. "The defense looked good and the offense picked it up as it went along. That's a good sign."

Red Cross Sets Swim Lessons

Free swimming lessons have been scheduled by the Lancaster County Red Cross at four Lincoln High School pools this fall, with registration being held on the first class night.

At East High School, for adults, and Lincoln High School, for boys and girls, classes will be held every Wednesday from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. beginning Sept. 4, and ending Dec. 18.

Southeast and East High School will hold classes for boys and girls from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. beginning Sept. 9 and continuing each Monday throughout the school year. Classes for boys and girls will be limited to those individuals between the ages of eight through fourteen.

Crete — Chances for Doane College to continue its football dominance over Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference foes are diminishing with each year according to Tiger head coach Ray Best.

Beginning his fourth year at the helm, Best has guided Doane to a 23-5-2 record, including the conference championship all three years.

"This year will be a lot tougher," Best allowed. "It's getting to the point where some of the teams don't care what happens in the season as long as they can beat Doane College."

"But our No. 1 goal is still to win the conference," he added following a Thursday morning workout. "And that could be decided early. We play the top three teams, Wesleyan, Midland and Hastings in our first three conference games, after opening with three tough non-conference opponents."

The Tigers, who just opened fall camp Monday, put the pads on for the first time Wednesday and Best responded by sending them into a full-line scrimmage.

Curtis Hurls One-Hitter

SAN DIEGO (AP) — John Curtis pitched a one-hitter—Fred Kendall's single in the eighth inning—and Jim Dwyer and Mike Tyson hit run-scoring singles in the ninth to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-1 victory over the San Diego Padres Thursday night.

Curtis, 8-12, was bidding to become the 12th pitcher in major league history to hurl a perfect game and the first since Oakland's Jim "Catfish" Hunter did it on May 8, 1968.

But his perfect game, no-hitter and shutout all ended in the eighth inning when he walked leadoff batter Dave Winfield on a 3-2 pitch, walked Derrell Thomas with one out, then gave up Fred Kendall's solid run-scoring single past shortstop Mike Tyson that tied the game.

The Cardinals had taken a 1-0 lead in the seventh when Ted Simmons led off with his 17th home run of the baseball season, a shot into the left field bleachers.

In the ninth, Larry Hardy, 7-4, pitching in relief of Randy Jones, got the first two St. Louis batters but Steve McEwen, Ken Reitz, pinch-hitter Dwyer and Tyson followed with successive singles to move the Cardinals within one game of first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Ray Best

"We were pleased with what we saw Wednesday," Best noted. Our offense is ahead of last year at this time, but we have quite a few defensive positions to fill from last season."

Best noted that some of his freshmen recruits could step in and help the defensive situation. "We have some people in that we weren't sure of getting earlier," Best said. "And they look like they're ready to step in and play some football for us."

Malone Agrees To Pact With ABA Utah Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — In one of the most ballyhooed signings in the history of professional sports, Moses Malone, the remarkable high school basketball player, came to terms with the Utah Stars Thursday on a contract estimated at more than $3 million.

The formal signing took place at the Royal Box of the Americana Hotel, a room usually reserved for the world's highest paid entertainers.

The 6-foot-11 Malone was flanked on one side by James A. Collier, the new owner of the American Basketball Association team, and Bucky Buckwalter, the club's director of player personnel and rumored to be the leading candidate for Utah's coaching vacancy. On the other side were his mother, Mrs. Mary Malone, and his attorney, Lee Fentress.

And in front of him were a battery of sports reporters and columnists, photographers, and radio and television microphones, cameras and kleig lights.

At the same time in Salt Lake City, Utah — home of the Stars — a news conference was held to announce Malone's signing.

The entire New York contingent, including Malone, stepped virtually all questions concerning the terms of the lucrative contract, while in Salt Lake City, Arnie Ferrin, the team's general manager, admitted only that its length was five years.

Reportedly, however, the contract could amount to $3.3 million, counting stock options, insurance policies and "contingency provisions."

Collier emphasized that one of the contingency provisions included a total of $120,000 set aside for Malone to use to attend college whenever he desired.

The highly sought youngster, who had averaged 39 points, 26 rebounds and 12 blocked shots last season in his senior year at Petersburg, Va., High School, had signed a grant-in-aid with the University of Maryland in June. He was scheduled to begin classes Wednesday, but

Americans Stampede Fire, 22-8

CHICAGO (AP) — The undefeated Birmingham Americans scored their eighth consecutive World Football League victory Thursday night with a blend of George Mira's passing and a solid running game for a 22-8 triumph over the Chicago Fire.

After taking a 14-8 halftime lead, Birmingham sewed up the nationally televised game late in the fourth quarter on a 66-yard drive in nine plays, capped by Art Cantrell's three yard sweep, just after he rambled 22 yards.

A crowd of 44,732 was announced at Soldier Field, which has a seating capacity of 55,700.

Birmingham	Fire
First downs	19 14
Passing yards	46-72 19-74

made only a brief appearance on campus, only to talk and play some basketball with the school's top player, John Lucas.

Later Wednesday, he made his decision to become one of the few players ever to jump from high school into the pros.

"I'm a basketball player first," Malone said in explaining his decision to bypass—at least temporarily—his collegiate career. "I did what I felt I had to do."

"As long as he's happy, I'm happy," said Mrs. Malone, a checker in a supermarket. "We needed a good center."

McGinnis Inks Pact With Pacers

INDIANAPOLIS Ind. (UPI) — The Indiana Pacers announced Thursday that "superstar" George McGinnis has signed a two-year contract with the three-time American Basketball Association champions.

Club president John Weissert made the announcement at a hastily called news conference, apparently ending a legal tug-of-war between the Pacers and the New York Knicks of the rival National Basketball Association for the service of the 6-8 all-league forward.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed. But McGinnis, who left Indiana University after his sophomore year to turn professional, said "I have a first-class contract."

The Pacers went to court in an effort to prevent McGinnis from negotiating with the Knicks. The ABA team had obtained temporary restraining orders against McGinnis, his agent, the Knicks and the Philadelphia 76ers of the NBA, preventing any negotiations or signings.

The Knicks obtained the rights to negotiate with McGinnis from Philadelphia.

Although McGinnis' three-year contract had expired, the Pacers argued that he was still their property for his option year.

A federal court hearing which was continued twice had been scheduled for Friday morning in an effort to clarify McGinnis' negotiation position.

Weissert said the contract was signed only Thursday afternoon — minutes before he and Richard Tinkham, executive vice president of the Pacers and president of the ABA, met newsmen.

Weissert denied published reports in New York that McGinnis had signed a six-year contract worth $2.5 million. "Everything out of New York was totally erroneous," he said.

He conceded, however, that it had been "difficult for us and for George to negotiate a contract."

New License Plate Could Help Control Traffic, Prevent Thefts

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A license plate that can do many complex jobs is now being developed in Princeton, N. J. Marilyn Offenheiser is an assistant editor for Electronics Magazine, a McGraw-Hill publication.)

By MARILYN OFFENHEISER

New York — Your car license plate may become an electronic system capable of helping control traffic, preventing theft and automating vehicle inspection. It may even transmit emergency radio messages between motorists and law enforcement agents.

The electronic license plate is being developed at RCA Corp.'s Microwave Technology Center in Princeton, N. J., but its inventor, Dr. Fred Sterzer, thinks it may be 10 or 15 years before the full system is ready for the market.

Dr. Sterzer says more immediately, the electronic license could be used as part of a collision-avoidance radar system. In the longer term, he says, "federal interest would be required to coordinate standards for the system; and so would cooperation from the auto companies."

The heart of the system is a small printed circuit board antenna that can receive radio signals at one frequency and rebroadcast them at two times that frequency to fixed stations or police cars.

An electronic coder would make the rebroadcast signal unique in the way that it is transmitted, so that each vehicle's signal would be at least slightly different than the next.

Streets and highways also would have to be equipped with a data processing network to broadcast signals to the license plates and receive the signals back. Conceivably, the transmitters could be hooked up to help dispatch ambulances and official vehicles, improve bus scheduling, or even be used by trucking companies to thwart hijackers.

Because the microwave transmitters could easily pick up the vehicle's unique signal at any time, Sterzer adds, owners who have violated summonses, for example, would be discouraged as would potential car thieves.

In addition Sterzer points out, since the microwave transmitters work using radar, they could not only alert police or speeders, but a red warning light could be triggered in the car, indicating the driver has exceeded the legal speed limit.

There are many other potential uses, Sterzer says. A car could be given a special code for admission to restricted parking areas, for toll booth bypass so that bills could be paid on an accumulated charge basis, and for more accurate safety inspections at computerized inspection stations.

How Do You Play To An Empty Chair?

Los Angeles (AP) — How do you spend 90 minutes playing to an empty chair?

Henry Fonda does it splendidly in the television version of his one-man stage play, "Clarence Darrow," airing Sept. 4.

Unlike Hal Holbrook's Mark Twain and James Whitmore's Will Rogers, both played directly to the audience, Fonda carries on imaginary conversations and courtroom interrogations as famed lawyer Clarence Darrow. "I had some trepidation about directing it," said John Rich, who until recently produced and directed "All in the Family."

"How do you put one man on for 90 minutes in a play? Holbrook and Whitmore talked directly to the audience. This is truly a play. Hank plays it internally. He really plays to an empty chair, but magically that person in the chair appears."

Rich said the first question everyone asked, including Fonda, was what to do about the empty chair in the courtroom. "They wanted to know if I would put someone in that chair," he said. "I said it works in the theater and it will play on television with an empty chair."

The play, cut down 22 minutes from the stage version, is a tour de force for Fonda. It was written from Irving Stone's biography.

Fonda did not play to the various cameras, as in a normal television play. Instead, the cameras were placed unobtrusively off stage and were cued by Rich on the basis of Fonda's known movements about the stage during the course of the play.

How Do You Play To An Empty Chair?

Los Angeles (AP) — How do you spend 90 minutes playing to an empty chair?

Henry Fonda does it splendidly in the television version of his one-man stage play, "Clarence Darrow," airing Sept. 4.

Unlike Hal Holbrook's Mark Twain and James Whitmore's Will Rogers, both played directly to the audience, Fonda carries on imaginary conversations and courtroom interrogations as famed lawyer Clarence Darrow. "I had some trepidation about directing it," said John Rich, who until recently produced and directed "All in the Family."

"How do you put one man on for 90 minutes in a play? Holbrook and Whitmore talked directly to the audience. This is truly a play. Hank plays it internally. He really plays to an empty chair, but magically that person in the chair appears."

Rich said the first question everyone asked, including Fonda, was what to do about the empty chair in the courtroom.

"They wanted to know if I would put someone in that chair," he said. "I said it works in the theater and it will play on television with an empty chair."

The play, cut down 22 minutes from the stage version, is a tour de force for Fonda. It was written from Irving Stone's biography.

Fonda did not play to the various cameras, as in a normal television play. Instead, the cameras were placed unobtrusively off stage and were cued by Rich on the basis of Fonda's known movements about the stage during the course of the play.

Dispute Over Site Of Giant Fuel Oil Tank Rekindles In Crete

By DEAN TERRILL

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Crete — A proposal to locate a million-gallon fuel oil tank near downtown Crete, lying dormant the last half of the summer, is again seething in controversy.

The issue was revived when officials of The Crete Mills indicated that materials for the structure, 27 feet high, and 90 feet in diameter, are to be delivered within the next few days. Mayor Norman Behrens claims the notice "has people fuming more than ever."

A storm of protest, including a petition with some 170 signatures of opposition, was evoked when the issue came before the city council in June. A building permit was granted on a 4-1 vote, the council contending there was little choice since the intended location is industrially zoned.

'Last Resort'

However, Mayor Behrens, opposing the location in his spring election campaign as well as at the time of vote, said he "assumed a different site would be used" because of public pressure. When he learned otherwise, he said he "decided to go to the press as a last resort."

"There is no question that the mill has met every legal requirement, including clearance by the state fire marshal's office," said the mayor, a commercial photographer. "But I still say that a three-story tank surrounded by residences is a tremendous safety hazard. It's also some awfully poor planning."

Referring to the structure as "The Crete Mills monster," he noted that the tank would be built less than two blocks west of a large Safeway store. A former member of the city planning commission, Behrens foresees the city's main business expansion toward this vicinity.

Industrially zoned since 1954, the proposed site is on a leased Missouri Pacific siding and is slightly more than the required 160 feet from adjoining property, which is partly residential. The tank would be fenced and would be diked to hold more than 110% of its capacity in case of rupture.

"We have handled this legally in every respect and to the best of our knowledge are taking every precaution," said plant manager Marvin Means. The mill, one of the town's largest and oldest industries, is owned by Lauhoff Grain Co. of Danville, Ill.

Noting that the plant may lose its natural gas supply in 1976, Means said the tank will be used as a reserve supplement to underground storage which is on the downtown mill site itself. He conceded that proximity to the plant is not essential, since there will be no fuel line hookup.

"The tank wouldn't even have to be in town, but this is an ideal location and we do need a rail siding," continued the manager. "We have been exploring other places and still are, but we have been unable to find anything else suitable."

Responding to a protest letter from the Sokol Ladies of Crete, another company official wrote that this appears to be the only feasible site. Donald L. Smith, vice president of production in Danville, had added assurance that the planned facility would be neither "unsafe nor an eyesore to the community."

Behrens believes the council would have rejected the building permit except that "one councilman claimed that refusal would bring a lawsuit against us." He said residents of the neighborhood were especially angered that the matter, tabled after a stormy public hearing, was passed at a subsequent meeting without further notice.

He acknowledged that townspeople "might be a little extra touchy" because of the anhydrous ammonia disaster which Crete suffered five years ago. Also pointing up the alleged danger was a July 31 storage tank fire near Ankeny, Iowa.

"People are accusing me of being anti-industry and that isn't true at all," the mayor stated. "The economic impact of the mill is awfully important to us. I am just 'anti' its tank monstrosity."

Lockharts Uphold Fairgoing Tradition

By LIANE GUENTHER

Star Staff Writer

Come blistering heat, drizzle or chilling cold, the Lockhart families from Bladen wouldn't miss the State Fair on a bet. Especially not when they can park their campers a half-mile from the hubbub and still take in the highlights at their leisure.

For them, the first of September is kind of like old home week. They've been camping out on the fairgrounds for 30 years and more, rarely missing the annual event.

"The State Fair really means a lot to us," said Wendell Lockhart, 44, who farms about 1,200 acres near Bladen, a small community just south of Hastings. "I guess it kind of gets in your blood. My daughters are the same way."

2 Deluxe Campers
Early this week, Wendell and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn and Nellie Lockhart, also of Bladen, pulled their two new, deluxe campers into adjacent parking spaces for a 10-day vacation.

And it's a cinch they won't consider leaving until the music stops, the last foot-long hotdog has been eaten and the lights go out a week from Sunday.

Although no one in his family exhibits at the state level anymore — his daughters are too young — Wendell said he still enjoys the sights, sounds and smells.

He said he's looking forward to seeing Loretta Lynn, Doc Severinsen and the stock car races.

While his two daughters, 10-year-old Gretchen and 8-year-old Christine, explore the carnival, he and his wife, Marge, will browse around the machinery, agricultural and home living exhibits.

"It was back in the early '40s when the whole family got into the State Fair habit," his mother said.

'Roughed It'
Wendell, then 11, brought his calves down to show them for 4-H, she recalled. At that time, the family of seven really "roughed it" in wooden cabins on the fairgrounds.

Better Way
"I tell people they don't know what they've missed unless they've been to the State Fair camping," he said.

The new camper park, near the intersection of N. 14th St. and Cornhusker Hwy., has a capacity of 450 units.

As of Thursday afternoon, only about half of those spaces had been filled, but a steady stream of campers was coming through the gates.

Fairgrounds manager Henry Brandt said the campground, which also has restroom and shower facilities, is reserved for fairgoers and exhibitors during the last week of August and the first week of September.

Rent for 125 stalls with sewage, electricity and water, is $3.50 a night; 100 lots with electricity and water rent for $3; 100 with lights only cost $2.50 a night and 125 with no services, including tent spaces, go for $2 a night.

Vince Foster, one of the two fair board members operating the campgrounds this year, said he expects the biggest barrage of campers to storm the gates Friday night after school lets out for the long Labor Day weekend.

Foster pointed out several improvements in the campground since it opened last year, just in time for the 1973 State Fair.

To avoid the swampy conditions which nearly paralyzed the campgrounds last year, all the streets have been paved and concrete slabs have been installed to assist in parking.

"We used to rent them for five years at a crack," she said. "When we left we'd just tie our mattresses to the rafters and lock the doors until next year."

"You had to be pretty good friends with your neighbors," she said, laughing.

"Since the walls were paper thin, full of holes and only went up six or seven feet, you could see and hear everything that went on next door."

And instead of sweeping dirt out the door, you'd just push it through the cracks in the floors, Wendell remembered.

Now, both families enjoy the soft, easy life of camping in style, with everything from a shower to color television, stereo and a queen-sized bed at their fingertips.

"This is the way to see the fair and really enjoy it," he said. "Some people try to do it all in a day, driving 100 miles to get here, tramping around the fair all day, then driving home at night in a hot car and kids fussing."

Wendell, then 11, brought his calves down to show them for 4-H, she recalled. At that time, the family of seven really "roughed it" in wooden cabins on the fairgrounds.

million projection, Nebraska received $20.9 million for local sewage treatment projects this year.

However, Ludwig said, just because need estimates have increased, that doesn't mean there will be more money allocated to Nebraska next year.

"This doesn't mean we're going to get any increase at all," he said.

But he said he figures the state that does get an increase will be the one with the best case for money and "we want to make sure we get our share."

The state received $11.1 million for sewage treatment projects at the community level in 1974 and $7.4 million the year before.

Ludwig said he should know by the end of the year about how much Nebraska will get for the next fiscal year.

Storm Sewers Included
A major reason for the substantial increase in projected needs, the grants administrator said, has to do with inclusion of storm sewers in water quality and Cornhusker Hwy., has a capacity of 450 units.

As of Thursday afternoon, only about half of those spaces had been filled, but a steady stream of campers was coming through the gates.

Fairgrounds manager Henry Brandt said the campground, which also has restroom and shower facilities, is reserved for fairgoers and exhibitors during the last week of August and the first week of September.

Rent for 125 stalls with sewage, electricity and water, is $3.50 a night; 100 lots with electricity and water rent for $3; 100 with lights only cost $2.50 a night and 125 with no services, including tent spaces, go for $2 a night.

Foster pointed out several improvements in the campground since it opened last year, just in time for the 1973 State Fair.

To avoid the swampy conditions which nearly paralyzed the campgrounds last year, all the streets have been paved and concrete slabs have been installed to assist in parking.

Waltham, Mass. (UPI) — GTE Sylvania Inc. has announced a boost in the prices of color television picture tubes averaging 2 to 4%.

The company said the increases, ranging from 85 cents to $11, are effective Sept. 1.

Included in that, Ludwig said, is the possibility the federal government will require separation of storm and sanitary sewers.

If that should happen, he said two communities in particular would have to spend large sums of money — Omaha and Plattsmouth.

Both communities now have combined storm and sanitary sewer systems, Ludwig said, which might have to be separated.

But Ludwig hastened to add that as of now there is no separation requirement. Dollar estimates were included in the new projections only because he and others felt "this may be necessary in the future."

Other reasons for the need increase, Ludwig said, include added criteria in federal water quality control programs which are either anticipated or in the works.

School Officials, Senators Pessimistic About Aid Law

By DON WALTON

Star Staff Writer

In an atmosphere of acknowledged pessimism, Lincoln school officials and state senators Thursday discussed plans to defend the 1974 state school aid bill now headed for a November showdown.

Unless a lawsuit designed to keep the law off the general election ballot is successful, the landmark school funding legislation will face a referendum vote 10 weeks hence.

"What I hear is pessimistic," Sen. Roland Luedtke told a breakfast meeting called by School Superintendent John Prasch.

"It's easy to vote against a tax."

Omaha Opposition
Luedtke said there is "no doubt" but that the opposition to the school aid bill will be centered in Omaha.

Prasch said he hopes supporters of the bill can put together a statewide citizens committee, with emphasis on community leaders, to urge voter support for the act.

But he said he thus far sees "no statewide leadership emerging."

The Nebraska State School Boards Association (NSSBA) is tied up with its court challenge of the referendum vote, Prasch noted, and is not likely to provide the assistance which could normally be expected.

"They've put their eggs in that basket," Prasch said.

Vote Said Prohibited

The NSSBA contends that the state constitution prohibits a referendum vote on the issue, since it involves state appropriations.

If the bill is allowed to take effect, it will over a two-year period equalize local and state tax support for public school operations.

The annual level of state aid will rise from $55 million to more than $160 million. While local property tax rates would rise to pay the bill.

But the public, Sen. Wally Barnett said, is "getting only one side of the story," namely the projected hike in sales and income tax rates.

"All you get out of the paper is the negative side," Barnett said. "There are no positive statements."

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, father of the bill, said it is difficult to designate an income level at which people are likely to pay more, rather than less, total taxes under the change since each individual case is different.

But, if voters reject the bill, Warner said, he has no doubt that "a comparable piece of legislation" will eventually be mandated into law by court decisions.

Sylvania Tubes Rise
Waltham, Mass. (UPI) — GTE Sylvania Inc. has announced a boost in the prices of color television picture tubes averaging 2 to 4%.

The company said the increases, ranging from 85 cents to $11, are effective Sept. 1.

Included in that, Ludwig said, is the possibility the federal government will require separation of storm and sanitary sewers.

If that should happen, he said two communities in particular would have to spend large sums of money — Omaha and Plattsmouth.

Both communities now have combined storm and sanitary sewer systems, Ludwig said, which might have to be separated.

But Ludwig hastened to add that as of now there is no separation requirement. Dollar estimates were included in the new projections only because he and others felt "this may be necessary in the future."

Other reasons for the need increase, Ludwig said, include added criteria in federal water quality control programs which are either anticipated or in the works.

The patrol gave the names of the suspects as Howard Dulworth, about 31, listed as wanted for armed robbery in Indianapolis; James Richardson

A number of court rulings have held that school systems predominantly supported by property taxes do not adhere to equal protection requirements of the U.S. Constitution.

It might take four or five years to mandate a change in Nebraska, Warner said, "but it would come."

Voter repeal of the bill may be the only means of showing people what lack of school aid will do to their property tax levies, Sen. Shirley Marsh said.

"It may be the thing to push people all over the state to look at it (state aid) realistically when their property taxes, by necessity, go up," she said.

If voters repealed the 1974 bill, Barnett said, the Legislature might decide to wipe out even the current $65 million in annual state support, assuming that the people have spoken against state aid.

School Board member Lou Roper said the school aid issue is viewed with "tremendous apathy" by the public.

"Only school people and senators are interest, at this point," he said.

Peru Plans Two Bicentennial Projects

Peru — Two major projects have been announced by the Peru bicentennial committee. The first will be a colonial crafts festival set for Oct. 19, and the second will be an Armistices Day dedication of a memorial at Mt. Vernon Cemetery. The crafts festival, to be held at the city hall, will be headed by Mrs. Nita Pryor. The veterans memorial will honor those who served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam wars.

Triplets Born To Battle Creek Holstein

Fluoridation Placed On Scottsbluff Ballot

Scottsbluff (AP) — Meeting in special session Thursday, the Scottsbluff City Council officially approved a motion placing a fluoridation issue on the November general election ballot. The move was prompted by a group of residents who presented petitions opposing the fluoridation of the city's water supply. Under state law, unless voters directly reject fluoridation, all cities in the state must have their water supplies fluoridated by Jan. 1, 1975.

Midland Director Of Nursing Tabbed

Fremont (UPI) — Kathleen Cheney, director of the Immanuel Hospital School of Nursing in Omaha, has been named director of nursing at Midland College, school officials have announced. Named associate director of the Midland-Immanuel nursing program was Martha Foxall, who is assistant director of nursing at Immanuel. Midland will offer a bachelor of arts degree in nursing, with the first four-year students scheduled to graduate in 1978.

Bluffs Bank Robber Nervous

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP)—A nervous gunman held up the Council Bluffs Savings Bank on Thursday in the city's west end Thursday and narrowly missed being hit by a car as he fled on foot.

There was no official word on the amount of loot. Unconfirmed reports said it was about $2,500.

The Iowa Highway Patrol issued an alert for a green 1971 Ford Torino with Indiana license plates believed to have headed east out of the city carrying three suspects in the robbery.

The patrol gave the names of the suspects as Howard Dulworth, about 31, listed as wanted for armed robbery in Indianapolis; James Richardson and Bob Anthony. They are considered "armed and extremely dangerous," the patrol said.

Police and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents also searched through sections of Council Bluffs and Omaha for the gunman, described as in his mid to early 30s.

Bank teller Mary Lou Wrinkle said the gunman entered the bank shortly before 11 a.m. and waited about 10 minutes until only two customers were present before he approached her cage.

She said the man, who she said appeared "very frightened and nervous," pulled a small chrome-plated pistol, handed her a zippered bank bag and told her to "fill that bag with cash."

Miss Wrinkle said he cleaned out her teller's cage and the one next to hers, then ran for the door to the street.

The man at first pushed on the door which was marked "pull," and yelled, "Let me out, let me out, let me out," Miss Wrinkle said. She said he finally got the door open and ran into the street.

Police said a Council Bluffs couple reported their car narrowly missed hitting the man as it emerged from an alley alongside the bank office.

Officers said a bandit was followed for a time by a car which may have contained accomplices who were covering his getaway.

Leg Ailment Delays First District Walk

Congressional candidate Hess Dyer, who is in the process of walking 734 miles across the First Congressional District, has been hospitalized in Pender with a leg ailment.

Dyer, 37, is suffering from what a doctor has diagnosed as phlebitis. It was caused by the aggravation of an old injury.

He was expected to remain in a week in the Pender Community Hospital.

Dyer had walked to Emerson in Thurston County, nearly 100 of his planned 734 miles. His campaign staff in Lincoln reported he had met hundreds of people in 15 communities in northeast Nebraska since he started his walk for Congress in Bloomfield Sunday.

The staff also reported 103 people had joined the "Two Cents Worth Club," which has collected more than $1,500 in contributions of $14.68 or less.

From Pender, Dyer thanked those who have supported him thus far in his walk. "The response in personal support and in grassroots contributions has been phenomenal and exciting," Dyer said.

"I look forward to continuing this walk just as soon as doctors give me the go-ahead."

"There is a lot more of the First District yet to see and a lot more people to meet before election day."

Dyer's campaign staff noted that coffees and other events already scheduled on the walk will be held, with Dyer's wife Carol or a staff representative in attendance.

In other words, Ludwig said, the outlays anticipated in projecting that dollar price tag represent "a goal to shoot for."

A survey done a year ago indicated Nebraska's needs amounted to $400 million.

Survey For Congress

Ludwig said the new survey was done to satisfy congressional requirements. The information, to be presented officially to Congress next month, will be used in determining Nebraska's 1976 federal anti-pollution allocation.

'Enumerators' Feed Crop Forecast Mills

By JAMES P. STERBA

Waverly, Neb. — Sometimes people wonder about Adolph J. Nemec. When they see him park by the roadside and walk into a cornfield, as he does almost daily, it raises all sorts of questions about what he is doing.

Nemec, 51, counts corn and soybeans and supervises four women and another man who do the same thing.

They are among some 1,300 part-time "crop enumerators" who wander around the nation's farm fields with tape measures, Day-Glo ribbons, stakes and other tools (snakebit kits are optional) gathering data for the United States Department of Agriculture's monthly crop reports.

The reports are forecasts of the size of fall harvests. They are controversial because they have economic power of their own, regardless of what, for instance, the corn crop turns out to be. This year, because of worry over inflation, a summer drought and the lowest level in grain stocks since World War II, the reports have had more impact than usual.

Nemec is a practitioner of the mathematics of more or less. And so are the farmers whose opinions of their crops also provide data for the monthly forecasts. Yet, the cornfield mathematics of more or less tends to harden somewhere up the ladder and through the computer. It emerges in neat digits and, despite the cautions, it makes people and prices jump up or down.

When the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board emerged from 12 hours behind locked doors in Washington on Aug. 12 and announced that its corn harvest forecast had plummeted from a previous 6.6 billion-bushel bumper yield to 4.9 billion bushels because of the drought, the news set off enough economic waves to suggest that the data had originated from some sacred mountain instead of some sample cornfields.

Yet in Nebraska, in the heart of the Corn Belt, the information for that forecast came from 28 enumerators such as Nemec who measured and counted only 200 corn row samples 15 feet long, and from the surveyed opinions of only about 850 of the state's 69,000 farmers.

Agriculture officials in Washington are somewhat secretive about how far off their forecasts are month by month during the growing season. They do say that on the average by June they are high or low by only 4 to 8% on a state basis and by 1 to 2% nationally, and that their accuracy improves as the harvest nears.

But at the Nebraska state office of the federal Agriculture Department's Statistical Reporting Service, charts show that over the last five years forecasts have been off as much as 20% as late as August and that the percentage of error sometimes does not fall below 10% until October, just before harvest.

This year, forecasting is especially difficult, says Douglas Murfield, head of the Statistical Reporting Service for Nebraska: "In good years the crops are uniform in size and easier to generalize about. This year the variation is much greater from field to field."

But for the corn crop, there was no direct information from the field until late in July. During early months, virtually all information came from farmers, some of whom have been sent questionnaires for decades.

Murfield said that, beginning this year, his office was attempting to weed out mailing lists in an effort to get a greater percentage of responses from farmers. Nationwide, only about one-third complete and return questionnaires.

No checks are made on their answers of acreage planted or crop condition but a correction factor is used in weighing statewide responses based on how far they were off in past years.

Officials Say Stamp Program Not Threatened

By K. STEINBRUEGGE
Star Staff Writer

Federal, state and county officials Thursday denied a cutoff of Nebraska's food stamp program was threatened because of certification problems at the Wounded Knee encampment.

"Absolutely" no plans are being made to terminate the state program, according to M. K. Orr, acting food stamp program director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture regional office in Chicago, administrators of the program.

USDA had sent a "cease-and-desist" telegram to the State Welfare Department, advising them to discontinue "disapproved procedures" of certifying Wounded Knee followers for receiving food stamps.

Orr said USDA officials are considering filing a fiscal claim against the state for $4,500 worth of stamps issued to barracks residents before the encampment stamp program was terminated Aug. 9.

Besides the certification problem, USDA also cited group cooking, separation of barracks rooms and proxy applications as violations.

Virgil Falloon, public information director for the State Welfare Department, agreed with Orr, saying it was not "politically feasible and is almost inconceivable" for the Nebraska program to be terminated.

He said the program to assist trial followers in Lincoln may have been "tacitly approved" by Harold McGrew, former State Welfare Department food stamp program director.

County, State Comply

Meanwhile, county and state officials are trying to comply with USDA requests, according to Jerry Lemonds, director of the Lancaster County Welfare Department.

The only way the Nebraska program would be discontinued is if the requests were not complied with, he said.

"We cannot attempt subterfuge. We must comply with the laws," he added.

However, he said one problem remains. This is the USDA requirement that a third party, such as a banker, lawyer or credit union, verify the financial status of stamp applicants.

Transient Status

Because of the transient status of many barracks residents, no checks on income can be run, Lemonds said.

"Frankly, I think without the verification there is very little chance they'll be issued food stamps now," he said.

Fourteen families have applied for food stamps since the encampment program was discontinued. Their cases still are pending.

Orr suggested county relief funds be used to help support the encampment, because "the county and state have some obligation to help these people."

'Not Mass Feeding'

"The food stamp program is for families," he said. "It is not set up to handle mass feeding, even in an emergency."

Lemonds noted that only permanent residents may receive relief funds.

"Frankly, I can't see any solution in general," he said.

He added that he had been misquoted on statements regarding "harassment."

While he said he had used the term, he emphasized that he meant the harassment resulted from the general situation, not USDA.

Although he said USDA could do more to help, "they're just doing their job. They're extremely interested in the problem."

Food needs at the barracks will have to be supplied totally now by the Lincoln Committee of Concerned People (LCCP), according to general chairman The Rev. Robert Jeambey.

Jeambey, saying he had a "suspicious mind," claimed the USDA order was an attempt to force plea bargaining in the Wounded Knee trials.

He said LCCP hopes to get volunteers and food donations from Lincoln churches in order to help the trial followers. LCCP has enough financial resources to provide groceries for a few weeks, he added.

The stamp cutoff was called a "government attempt to suppress or destroy" the American Indian Movement, to which many trial followers belong, by Doug Durham of St. Paul, Minn., national AIM chief of staff.

'Act Of Genocide'

He quoted Dennis Banks, a key defendant in the St. Paul Wounded Knee trials, as saying "this is an act of genocide — no food for the Indian people."

Durham said AIM would send a team to Lincoln to investigate the situation and to possibly institute charges against the USDA.

Tourist Attraction Signs Case Pursued By State

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Even though all that remains of 42 tourist attraction signs along Interstate 80 are the cement footings, the signs issue is still alive and breathing.

Special Assistant Atty. Gen. Gary Wich said Thursday the state is still pursuing a lawsuit asserting its right to erect the signs over the opposition of the federal government.

"We haven't dropped the case," Wich said. "We're going to take it down to St. Louis (U.S. Eighth circuit Court of Appeals)."

Assumed Dead

Most have assumed the issue died when Federal District Judge Warren K. Urbom denied the state's request for an order blocking a threatened cutoff in Federal highway Administration money to Nebraska if the signs remained.

A reluctant Gov. J. James Exon ordered the signs down July 1 after a month of verbal and legal sparring with Federal Highway Administrator Norbert Tiemann. Exon's opponent in the 1970 gubernatorial race. The signs, which pointed the way to such spots as Buffalo Bill's ranch and Boys Town, cost $100,000 to erect and are now in storage.

The central issue — Can the federal government force the state to take the signs down? — is still unanswered, Wich said, even though the signs have been mothballed.

"Arbitrary, Capricious" "The Federal Highway Administration's action was arbitrary and capricious," he said. "The State of Nebraska is going to take the position that the federal government overstepped its authority and infringed on states' rights."

In spite of the denial of the temporary restraining order, Wich said, "We haven't lost the war, only a battle."

Wich said Urbom exceeded the bounds of hearing on a temporary restraining order and in effect ruled on the merits of the case.

"We didn't come into court expecting to argue the merits of the case. We only intended to show that it would not hurt the federal government to continue highway aid until the case is settled," he said.

Guidelines

A ruling in the case, he said, could set some clear guidelines governing the erection of information signs along the entire U.S. interstate system.

The signs were originally erected as part of an experiment to boost the state's tourism industry. When the experiment was concluded, the federal government ordered the signs down but the state balked.

The state contended Tiemann was being arbitrary, since he was not ordering similar signs giving motorists the frequencies of local radio stations taken down. In addition, the state said similar signs in Iowa and Kansas were being allowed to stand.

Since Urbom's decision Wich said he and other state attorneys have been researching the case for eventual oral arguments.

However, he said the signs case will probably not be pressed until arguments are heard on another case challenging the federal government's impoundment of $20 million in federal highway funds for Nebraska.

Boxcar Distribution Regulation Defended

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has the right to tell the railroads how to distribute boxcars to grain elevators when boxcars are in short supply, the Nebraska Supreme Court was told Thursday.

Asst. Atty. Gen. C. C. Sheldon said in a brief that a boxcar shortage during the 1973 harvest and complaints from grain elevators about discrimination in boxcar distribution warranted the commission's decision to mandate a formula.

Nebraska's five major railroads are asking the court to overturn the formula and the law which authorizes it on the grounds that it interferes with interstate commerce.

The formula adopted last year by the commission requires the railroads to distribute boxcars on the basis on shippers' past loadings. It has not been in effect, however, since the railroads immediately appealed it to the Supreme Court.

In defending the formula, Sheldon wrote: "The Interstate Commerce Act and the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution do not preclude all state regulation which may in any way be connected with interstate commerce."

Not only is there no conflict with the federal law, he said, but state law directs the commission to formulate a scheme for distributing boxcars when the supply is inadequate.

Officers located the pickup and a suspect reportedly was in custody.

York (AP) — York County sheriff's officers have located a body along U.S. Highway 34 five miles east of here which according to a spokesman was "possibly struck by a vehicle."

The middle-aged man carried papers identifying him as being from Lincoln.

The search for the body was begun because of reports of a pickup having hair and blood on it.

Blast Levels Half Block, Kills Man

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Half a downtown block was leveled and set afire early Thursday by an explosion that killed at least one person and injured 13 others.

"This is the first fatality," said Mayor Robert Kirk Walker. "There may be others, but we don't know yet."

Chattanooga police identified the victim as Frank Ratcliff, 57, a janitor at one of the buildings. Only one of the 13 injured persons was admitted to a hospital.

Police and Fire Department officials refused to speculate as to the cause of the blast in the predominantly black neighborhood.

Fire Marshal Mike Quinn said two city arson investigators had been assigned to the case.

"We don't have any idea that it's arson," Quinn said, "but we always investigate in something like this."

The body, burned beyond recognition, was found by rescue workers and arson investigators probing the rubble of what had been a two-story brick building that houses two night clubs, a barber shop and several second-floor apartments.

The blast, heard several miles away, leveled one building on East Ninth Street — a main downtown thoroughfare — and gutted the adjacent St. James Baptist church and an adjoining building. A three-story structure across the street was heavily damaged.

"There was this loud noise and then the whole house fell down on my head," said the Rev. John W. McDonald, 79, who operated the barbershop which was destroyed.

McDonald, pastor of the nearby First Christian Community church, was left with little more than the clothes he wore. He lived in an apartment over his barbershop and his lost possessions, including his Bible.

The pastor's car was crushed by falling debris, along with its trunk full of luggage belonging to relatives visiting from Illinois.

McDonald, his brother-in-law, John C. Banks, 73, Harvey, Ill.; a niece, Doris Smith, 48, Chicago, and her son, Gary D. Smith, 12, were in the barbershop waiting to go to the bus terminal to return to Illinois.

"Doris was showing me how to work my new Polaroid when all of a sudden the walls started coming down just like it did in Jericho," said McDonald.

Two policemen, Rick Wynn and Don Weller, were patrolling three blocks away when the blast occurred at 3:30 a.m. and rescued McDonald and his relatives. None was seriously hurt.

The blast occurred just a few blocks from the city's main business area. Most of the buildings along East Ninth date back to the turn of the century.

Many of the two- and three-story structures house bars, pool halls, private clubs or barbershops on the street level and apartments on the upper floors.

Surgery Didn't Bother Him

Ruskin (AP) — Bruce Meyer, a three-year letterman in both football and basketball at Ruskin High School, was scheduled to graduate last May 17.

Three days earlier his left leg was amputated at the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver.

Six weeks later he could be seen water skiing on Lovewell Lake in Kansas, south of Superior.

Meyer, who is 18 and 6 foot 4, underwent the surgery after a malignant tumor was found in the leg. Just last fall surgery was performed on his knee because of a football injury but X-rays showed no sign of a malignancy.

His father, Orville Meyer, who farms about two miles east of here, said "The first day after surgery, Bruce was sitting up in a chair. The second day he was on crutches. The third day he went up and down the hospital steps and on the fifth day we took him on a trip into the mountains."

Mrs. Meyer said, "Two weeks after he was released from the hospital I looked out the window and saw him on the ladder working on the roof of a steel machine shed we started to build."

"We didn't know how he got up there, but there were his crutches at the bottom of the ladder, and he was working away."

"That's not all," his father said. "Bruce operated the combine during harvest and drives the tractor without any trouble at all."

Bruce, the oldest of six children, has never showed signs of dependency or depression, according to his parents.

Bruce said, "Of course I didn't look forward to the amputation but it didn't really bother me all that much — I knew it had to be done."

He is undergoing chemotherapy and later will be fitted with an artificial leg.

Then he plans to attend a technical school and become a carpenter or "see what that leg will allow me to do."

By JAMES P. STERBA

Waverly, Neb. — Sometimes people wonder about Adolph J. Nemec. When they see him park by the roadside and walk into a cornfield, as he does almost daily, it raises all sorts of questions about what he is doing.

Nemec, 51, counts corn and soybeans and supervises four women and another man who do the same thing.

They are among some 1,300 part-time "crop enumerators" who wander around the nation's farm fields with tape measures, Day-Glo ribbons, stakes and other tools (snakebit kits are optional) gathering data for the United States Department of Agriculture's monthly crop reports.

The reports are forecasts of the size of fall harvests. They are controversial because they have economic power of their own, regardless of what, for instance, the corn crop turns out to be. This year, because of worry over inflation, a summer drought and the lowest level in grain stocks since World War II, the reports have had more impact than usual.

Nemec is a practitioner of the mathematics of more or less. And so are the farmers whose opinions of their crops also provide data for the monthly forecasts. Yet, the cornfield mathematics of more or less tends to harden somewhere up the ladder and through the computer. It emerges in neat digits and, despite the cautions, it makes people and prices jump up or down.

When the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board emerged from 12 hours behind locked doors in Washington on Aug. 12 and announced that its corn harvest forecast had plummeted from a previous 6.6 billion-bushel bumper yield to 4.9 billion bushels because of the drought, the news set off enough economic waves to suggest that the data had originated from some sacred mountain instead of some sample cornfields.

Yet in Nebraska, in the heart of the Corn Belt, the information for that forecast came from 28 enumerators such as Nemec who measured and counted only 200 corn row samples 15 feet long, and from the surveyed opinions of only about 850 of the state's 69,000 farmers.

Agriculture officials in Washington are somewhat secretive about how far off their forecasts are month by month during the growing season. They do say that on the average by June they are high or low by only 4 to 8% on a state basis and by 1 to 2% nationally, and that their accuracy improves as the harvest nears.

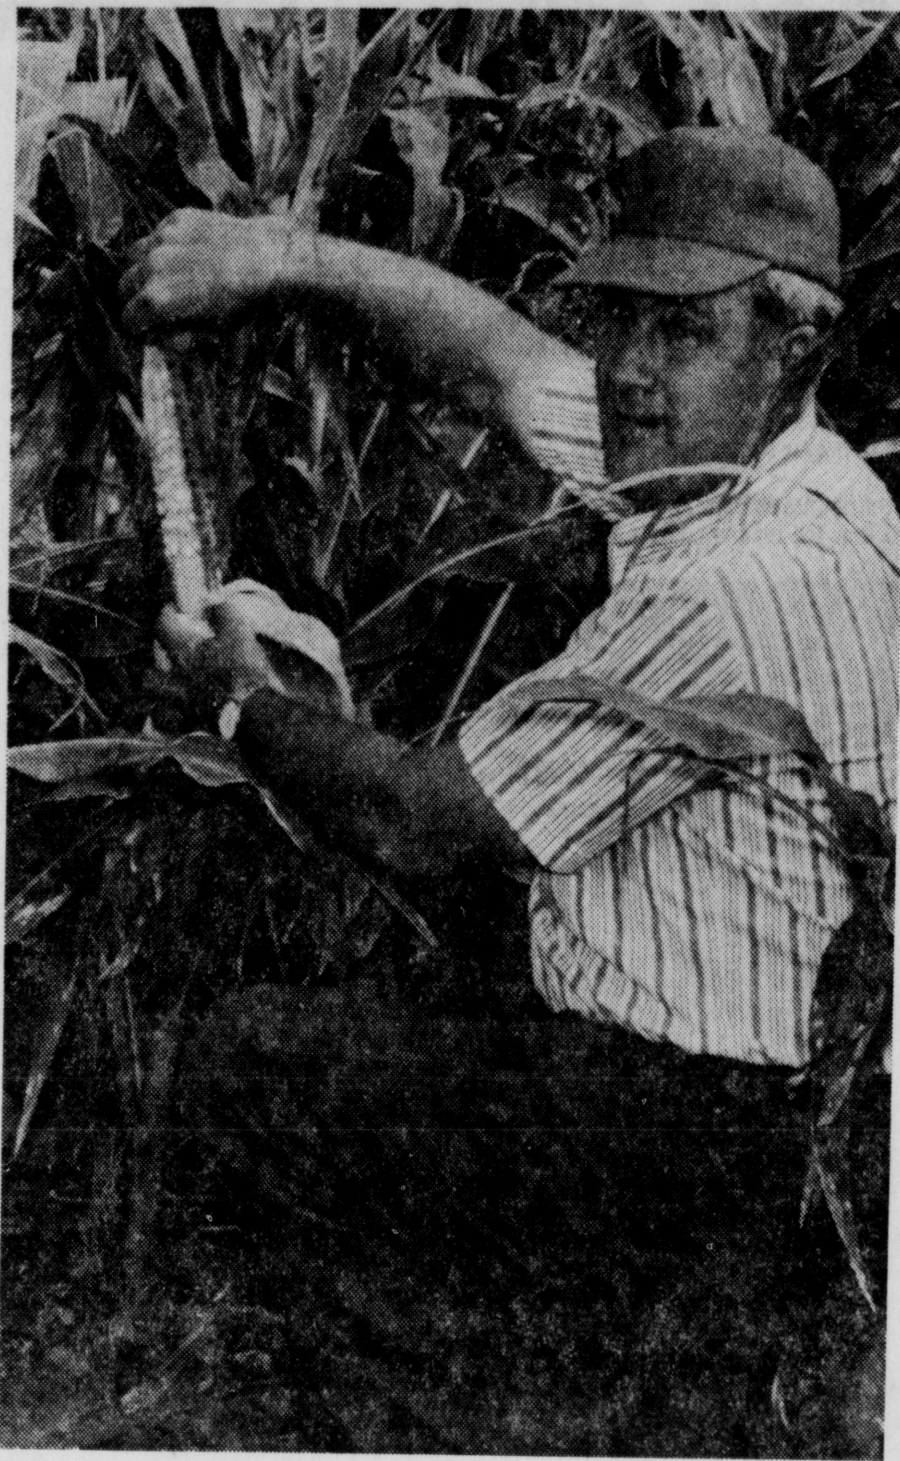

But at the Nebraska state office of the federal Agriculture Department's Statistical Reporting Service, charts show that over the last five years forecasts have been off as much as 20% as late as August and that the percentage of error sometimes does not fall below 10% until October, just before harvest.

This year, forecasting is especially difficult, says Douglas Murfield, head of the Statistical Reporting Service for Nebraska: "In good years the crops are uniform in size and easier to generalize about. This year the variation is much greater from field to field."

But for the corn crop, there was no direct information from the field until late in July. During early months, virtually all information came from farmers, some of whom have been sent questionnaires for decades.

Murfield said that, beginning this year, his office was attempting to weed out mailing lists in an effort to get a greater percentage of responses from farmers. Nationwide, only about one-third complete and return questionnaires.

No checks are made on their answers of acreage planted or crop condition but a correction factor is used in weighing statewide responses based on how far they were off in past years.

Officials Say Stamp Program Not Threatened

By K. STEINBRUEGGE
Star Staff Writer

Federal, state and county officials Thursday denied a cutoff of Nebraska's food stamp program was threatened because of certification problems at the Wounded Knee encampment.

"Absolutely" no plans are being made to terminate the state program, according to M. K. Orr, acting food stamp program director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture regional office in Chicago, administrators of the program.

USDA had sent a "cease-and-desist" telegram to the State Welfare Department, advising them to discontinue "disapproved procedures" of certifying Wounded Knee followers for receiving food stamps.

May File Claim
Orr said USDA officials are considering filing a fiscal claim against the state for $4,500 worth of stamps issued to barracks residents before the encampment stamp program was terminated Aug. 9.

Besides the certification problem, USDA also cited group cooking, separation of barracks rooms and proxy applications as violations.

Virgil Falloon, public information director for the State Welfare Department, agreed with Orr, saying it was not "politically feasible and is almost inconceivable" for the Nebraska program to be terminated.

He said the program to assist trial followers in Lincoln may have been "tacitly approved" by Harold McGrew, former State Welfare Department food stamp program director.

County, State Comply
Meanwhile, county and state officials are trying to comply with USDA requests, according to Jerry Lemonds, director of the Lancaster County Welfare Department.

The only way the Nebraska program would be discontinued is if the requests were not complied with, he said.

"We cannot attempt subterfuge. We must comply with the laws," he added.

However, he said one problem remains. This is the USDA requirement that a third party, such as a banker, lawyer or credit union, verify the financial status of stamp applicants.

Transient Status
Because of the transient status of many barracks residents, no checks on income can be run, Lemonds said.

"Frankly, I think without the verification there is very little chance they'll be issued food stamps now," he said.

Fourteen families have applied for food stamps since the encampment program was discontinued. Their cases still are pending.

Orr suggested county relief funds be used to help support the encampment, because "the county and state have some obligation to help these people."

"Not Mass Feeding"
"The food stamp program is for families," he said. "It is not set up to handle mass feeding, even in an emergency."

Lemonds noted that only permanent residents may receive relief funds.

"Frankly, I can't see any solution in general," he said.

He added that he had been misquoted on statements regarding "harassment."

While he said he had used the term, he emphasized that he meant the harassment resulted from the general situation, not USDA.

Although he said USDA could do more to help, "they're just doing their job. They're extremely interested in the problem."

Food needs at the barracks will have to be supplied totally now by the Lincoln Committee of Concerned People (LCCP), according to general chairman The Rev. Robert Jeamby.

Jeamby, saying he had a "suspicious mind," claimed the USDA order was an attempt to force plea bargaining in the Wounded Knee trials.

He said LCCP hopes to get volunteers and food donations from Lincoln churches in order to help the trial followers. LCCP has enough financial resources to provide groceries for a few weeks, he added.

The stamp cutoff was called a "government attempt to suppress or destroy" the American Indian Movement, to which many trial followers belong, by Doug Durham of St. Paul, Minn., national AIM chief of staff.

'Act Of Genocide'
He quoted Dennis Banks, a key defendant in the St. Paul Wounded Knee trials, as saying "this is an act of genocide — no food for the Indian people."

Durham said AIM would send a team to Lincoln to investigate the situation and to possibly institute charges against the USDA.

Tourist Attraction Signs Case Pursued By State

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Even though all that remains of 42 tourist attraction signs along Interstate 80 are the cement footings, the signs issue is still alive and breathing.

Special Assistant Atty. Gen. Gary Welch said Thursday the state is still pursuing a lawsuit asserting its right to erect the signs over the opposition of the federal government.

"We haven't dropped the case," Welch said. "We're going to take it down to St. Louis (U.S. Eighth circuit Court of Appeals)."

Assumed Dead
Most have assumed the issue died when Federal District Judge Warren K. Urbom denied the state's request for an order blocking a threatened cutoff in Federal highway Administration money to Nebraska if the signs remained.

A reluctant Gov. J. James Exon ordered the signs down July 1 after a month of verbal and legal sparring with Federal Highway Administrator Norbert Tiemann, Exon's opponent in the 1970 gubernatorial race. The signs, which pointed the way to such spots as Buffalo Bill's ranch and Boys Town, cost $100,000 to erect and are now in storage.

The central issue — Can the federal government force the state to take the signs down? — is still unanswered, Welch said, even though the signs have been mothballed.

'Arbitrary, Capricious'
"The Federal Highway Administration's action was arbitrary and capricious," he said.

"The State of Nebraska is going to take the position that the federal government overstepped its authority and infringed on states' rights."

In spite of the denial of the temporary restraining order, Welch said, "We haven't lost the war, only a battle."

Welch said Urbom exceeded the bounds of hearing on a temporary restraining order and in effect ruled on the merits of the case.

"We didn't come into court expecting to argue the merits of the case. We only intended to show that it would not hurt the federal government to continue highway aid until the case is settled," he said.

Guidelines
A ruling in the case, he said, could set some clear guidelines governing the erection of information signs along the entire U.S. interstate system.

The signs were originally erected as part of an experiment to boost the state's tourism industry. When the experiment was concluded, the federal government ordered the signs down but the state balked. The state contended Tiemann was being arbitrary, since he was not ordering similar signs giving motorists the frequencies of local radio stations taken down.

In addition, the state said similar signs in Iowa and Kansas were being allowed to stand.

Since Urbom's decision Welch said he and other state attorneys have been researching the case for eventual oral arguments.

However, he said the signs case will probably not be pressed until arguments are heard on another case challenging the federal government's impoundment of $20 million in federal highway funds for Nebraska.

In defending the formula, Sheldon wrote: "The Interstate Commerce Act and the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution do not preclude all state regulation which may in any way be connected with interstate commerce."

Not only is there no conflict with the federal law, he said, but state law directs the commission to formulate a scheme for distributing boxcars when the supply is inadequate.

The formula adopted last year

Blast Levels Half Block, Kills Man

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Half a downtown block was leveled and set afire early Thursday by an explosion that killed at least one person and injured 13 others.

"This is the first fatality," said Mayor Robert Kirk Walker. "There may be others, but we don't know yet."

Chattanooga police identified the victim as Frank Ratcliff, 57, a janitor at one of the buildings.

Only one of the 13 injured persons was admitted to a hospital.

Police and Fire Department officials refused to speculate as to the cause of the blast in the predominantly black neighborhood.

Fire Marshal Mike Quinn said two city arson investigators had been assigned to the case.

"We don't have any idea that it's arson," Quinn said, "but we always investigate in something like this."

The body, burned beyond recognition, was found by rescue workers and arson investigators probing the rubble of what had been a two-story brick building that houses two night clubs, a barber shop and several second-floor apartments.

The blast, heard several miles away, leveled one building on East Ninth Street — a main downtown thoroughfare — and gutted the adjacent St. James Baptist church and an adjoining building. A three-story structure across the street was heavily damaged.

"There was this loud noise and then the whole house fell down on my head," said the Rev. John W. McDonald, 79, who operated the barbershop which was destroyed.

McDonald, pastor of the nearby First Christian Community church, was left with little more than the clothes he wore. He lived in an apartment over his barbershop and his lost possessions, including his Bible.

The pastor's car was crushed by falling debris, along with its trunk full of luggage belonging to relatives visiting from Illinois.

McDonald, his brother-in-law, John C. Banks, 73, Harvey, Ill.; a niece, Doris Smith, 48, Chicago, and her son, Gary D. Smith, 12, were in the barbershop waiting to go to the bus terminal to return to Illinois.

"Doris was showing me how to work my new Polaroid when all of a sudden the walls started coming down just like it did in Jericho," said McDonald.

Two policemen, Rick Wynn and Don Weller, were patrolling three blocks away when the blast occurred at 3:30 a.m. and rescued McDonald and his relatives. None was seriously hurt.

The blast occurred just a few blocks from the city's main business area. Most of the buildings along East Ninth date back to the turn of the century.

Many of the two- and three-story structures house bars, pool halls, private clubs or barbershops on the street level and apartments on the upper floors.

Surgery Didn't Bother Him

Ruskin (AP) — Bruce Meyer, a three-year letterman in both football and basketball at Ruskin High School, was scheduled to graduate last May 17.

Three days earlier his left leg was amputated at the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver.

Six weeks later he could be seen water skiing on Lovewell Lake in Kansas, south of Superior.

Meyer, who is 18 and 6 foot 4, underwent the surgery after a malignant tumor was found in the leg. Just last fall surgery was performed on his knee because of a football injury but X-rays showed no sign of a malignancy.

His father, Orville Meyer, who farms about two miles east of here, said "The first day after surgery, Bruce was sitting up in a chair. The second day he was on crutches. The third day he went up and down the hospital steps and on the fifth day we took him on a trip into the mountains."

Mrs. Meyer said, "Two weeks after he was released from the hospital I looked out the window and saw him on the ladder working on the roof of a steel machine shed we started to build."

"We didn't know how he got up there, but there were his crutches at the bottom of the ladder, and he was working away."

"That's not all," his father said. "Bruce operated the combine during harvest and drives the tractor without any trouble at all."

Bruce, the oldest of six children, has never showed signs of despondency or depression, according to his parents.

Bruce said, "Of course I didn't look forward to the amputation but it didn't really bother me all that much — I knew it had to be done."

He is undergoing chemotherapy and later will be fitted with an artificial leg.

Then he plans to attend a technical school and become a carpenter or "see what that leg will allow me to do."

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
